

THE PRIZE BABY OF KANSAS CITY MO.

Cared of Disfiguring ECZEMA By the CUTICURA REMEDIES

Our baby when three weeks old was badly afflicted with Eczema. Her face, neck, chest, and nearly every joint of her body were raw and bleeding when we resorted to the CUTICURA Remedies. We began with CUTICURA (ointment) and CUTICURA SOAP, and after the first application we could see a change. After we had used them we were free from the same and had not another relapse. In less than a month, she was free from scales and blisters, and today has as lovely skin and hair as any child. This was shown at the Grand Fair, over which Mr. & Mrs. V. A. Miller presided, both City. Sold everywhere. FOSTER DRUG & CHEM. CO., Boston.

BOND INVESTIGATION.

Secretary Carlisle Appears Before the Senate Committee.

RELATIONS WITH THE SYNDICATE.

The Head of the Treasury Department and His Assistant, Testifying Under Oath, Tell of the Conference with Mr. Morgan and Other New York Bankers.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Secretary Carlisle was examined under oath yesterday by the senate committee appointed to investigate recent bond issues. The hearing was held in the rooms of the senate committee on Finance, Senators Harris, Vest, Walthall, Jones, of Nevada, and Platt being present. Chairman Harris explained that the committee had decided to take all the testimony under oath, and did not wish to make discriminations. Mr. Carlisle responded that he expected and desired to be put under oath.

Mr. Vest began the examination, asking for fuller explanation of the first bond contract with the Morgan syndicate than had been given in Mr. Carlisle's written statement. His main purpose, Secretary Carlisle said, was to prevent the shipments of gold from this country. Mr. Vest asked who made the first suggestion as to the protective clause in the bond contract with the Morgan syndicate. The secretary answered that the first draft was made in his private office and then taken to an adjoining room and shown to Mr. Morgan and Mr. Francis Lynde Stetson, after which some changes were made. This was the Mr. Stetson, the secretary explained in response to inquiries, who had been the law partner of the president.

"You never had negotiations with any other bankers outside of the Morgan syndicate?" asked Mr. Vest.

"There was some inquiry, but no negotiations were opened," said the secretary.

Mr. Carlisle went on to explain that the president was kept apprised of all phases of the negotiation. One of Mr. Vest's questions referred to the time of the president's information as compared with that of Mr. Belmont, to which the secretary said that the president's message giving information to congress as to the issue of the bond transaction was sent at noon, while Mr. Belmont did not reach Washington until 2 p. m.

To Mr. Vest's question as to why a public bond sale was resorted to at a later date, when the early sale was by private contract, Mr. Carlisle said the first move was due entirely to the emergencies existing, and to the disturbing reports, which were without a shadow of foundation, that the government had long contemplated a bond issue.

Mr. Vest's question turned to the Graves bid, which was rejected, the amount of the Graves award for $4,500,000 of bonds being given to the Morgan syndicate. He asked why, after the Graves bid was rejected, the government did not receive the benefits of the rise which had occurred in the price of the bonds, instead of the benefits going to the Morgan syndicate under their "blanket bid."

Mr. Carlisle said that was a matter of opinion, and in his judgment the Graves bid was a nullity, after which the Morgan bid, which was the next highest, took the bonds. His action, he said, was taken after consulting the law officers of the government. He would have taken the same course if the price of the bonds had fallen.

"But would the syndicate have taken the same course if the bonds had fallen?" interposed Mr. Jones.

The secretary answered that his course proceeded without reference to what the syndicate desired or would do. He believed, however, that if the price of the bonds had fallen he could have compelled the Morgan syndicate to take them.

"Is it not a fact," asked Mr. Vest, "that because the syndicate had carried out the protective clause you were inclined to favor them?"

"Not in the least," declared the secretary, emphatically. "I am not conscious of any such feeling."

"But you and the president were pleased with the manner in which the protective clause had been carried out?" queried Mr. Vest.

"Yes, but I am not conscious of the remotest feeling of favor resulting."

In answer to further questions Secretary Carlisle declared he had never contemplated paying in silver.

As rapidly and pointedly by Mr. Vest, Mr. Carlisle said he had gone to New York by direction of Mr. Carlisle before the syndicate bond contract was made, to ascertain the temper of the situation. He had visited bankers, officials, etc.

"Did you expect to get the temper of the situation from the bankers?" asked Mr. Vest.

The assistant secretary responded that he had talked with men at the clubs and with Mr. Fairchild and Mr. Stewart. His first specific instructions from Mr. Carlisle were to "go and see Mr. Belmont."

The secretary directed him to see what could be done to get gold from abroad, but authorized no proposition to be made. Mr. Belmont showed him unfavorable calligrams from Europe.

Mr. Vest's questions indicated surprise that Mr. Belmont should know of the treasury's need of gold and should be negotiating with Europe before Mr. Curtis had arrived.

The subsequent testimony showed that Mr. Belmont's view was pessimistic as to getting gold abroad. Mr. Morgan promised to do the best he could. At a later meeting at Mr. Morgan's house, arranged by telephone message between New York and Washington, the two gentlemen told him they could get gold abroad and sell $50,000,000 of bonds there.

It was understood that Mr. Carlisle would telephone Mr. Morgan from the treasury as to check the next day as to whether the general opinion had been approved. He telephoned Mr. Morgan that a messenger would carry a letter to him that night. The letter, which was from Mr. Carlisle, said the interest rate was too high. The two financiers then came to Washington, Mr. Belmont calling on Mr. Carlisle and Mr. Morgan on the witness.

Mr. Morgan said it was urgent for the government to act quickly in order to be able to continue its policy of gold payments. Mr. Stetson came over with Mr. Morgan. Thursday morning Mr. Morgan, Mr. Stetson and Mr. Curtis drew the contract, the witness dictating to an amanuensis Mr. Morgan and Mr. Stetson making occasional suggestions. It was then someone Mr. Morgan from Mr. Olney, who made some changes after which was signed, the right to sign the Belmont-Rothschild names being cabled from Europe.

The investigation will continue at New York on Thursday.

BANK PRESIDENT SHOT.

A Stranger Enters His Bank and Demands $10,000.

MISREANT THEN SHOOTS HIMSELF.

The Would-be Robber and His Victim Now Lying at a Hospital, and It is Feared That Both Men Are Fatally Wounded. The Identity of the Robber in Doubt.

NEW YORK, June 16.—President George H. Wyckoff, of the Bank of New Amsterdam, was shot in the abdomen as he sat at his desk in the bank office yesterday by a man who is said to be George T. Clark. The would-be assassin then turned the pistol on himself and fired two shots, both of which took effect. Both men are perhaps fatally injured.

The Bank of New Amsterdam is in the Metropolitan Opera House, at Broadway and Thirtieth Street. Mr. Wyckoff was alone in his office when Clark entered the bank. He walked into the front of the bank, turned down the corridor, and passing the clerks behind the wicket, without a word, went straight up to the president's room. He passed through and closed the door behind him, advanced politely to Mr. Wyckoff's desk and laid a pistol before him. It was a demand for $10,000. Mr. Wyckoff refused to comply, and Clark drew a pistol. Mr. Wyckoff jumped to disarm the man, who fired immediately, the ball entering Wyckoff's abdomen. Before the startled clerks could enter the president's room Clark turned the pistol and fired two bullets into his own body and fell to the floor.

Mr. Wyckoff staggered into the corridor, told the clerks to send for his wife and his friend, Mr. Tilford, who is vice president of the bank, and fell. Both men were taken to a hospital, where Mr. Wyckoff made an ante-mortem statement. Clark absolutely refused to give his name and address or occupation. He said he needed money, and had been out of employment for a week. He claimed that he had no particular motive other than that of getting money for the support of his wife and boy. He said:

"I had never seen the bank president before, and did not know him. He had never done me nor any member of my family any wrong. I did not mean to harm him, but when he refused the demand that I made, I mustn't do it. I hope he may recover. There can be no defamatory statements against this man, as he is of too high a standing. There was only one life I wanted to take, and that was mine."

The letter presented by Clark was found on Mr. Wyckoff's desk. It is written on note paper of the Hotel Marlborough, and is as follows:

"We want $10,000—five $2,000 bills, ten $100 bills. I will shoot you if you make a false move, so be careful. My partner outside has you covered. If you give an alarm within three minutes after I have left he will throw a stick of dynamite through the front entrance. Put money in an envelope. Don't talk."

"There was no signature. Whether there was really an accomplice or not is not known. The police do not know Clark, nor had any of the bank employees ever seen him about the bank. His real identity is a mystery, and every effort is being made to identify him. The accepted theory is that he was crazy."

The shooting created great excitement on Broadway and in Wall street. The attempt of Norcross to kill Russell Sage was recalled and intensified the excitement. The bank officers were quickly upon the scene and in a short while every arrangement was perfected for any emergency.

President Wyckoff has apartments in the Chelsea flats and also a home in Montclair, N. J., where his wife and two married daughters live.

A Delaware Murder Mystery.

WILMINGTON, Del., June 15.—Abner Hollingsworth, a farmer, aged about 30 years, who lived with his widowed mother near Wooddale, about seven miles from this city, was murdered late Sunday night or early yesterday morning. His body was found lying near the Baltimore and Ohio track by John Conner, the Wooddale station agent. There were two cuts on the side of the head, which had undoubtedly caused the man's death. Detectives from this city arrested Antonio Barthomai and Louis Tong, Italian quarrymen, who lived in the Italian colony near Wooddale. Hollingsworth was drinking with these men on Sunday, and when last seen alive was lying in the rear of Barthomai's shanty. Tong had been heard to threaten to kill him.
