DEFENSE PRESENTS ITS CASE

The Eisenhower Murder Trial Nearing Its Close.

THE 'HERALD'S' DETAILED REPORT

One of the Jurors Taken Ill at Noon To-day. The Defense Will Offer the Plea of Insanity—Witnesses Fail to Appear at the Morning Session.

Special to EVENING HERALD.

POTTSVILLE, June 18.—With the close of the morning session of the trial of Theodore Eisenhower yesterday for the murder of John Schwindt the greater part of sensational developments of the day ended. Much expectation being upon the calling of William Schwindt, the man who no doubt owes his life to the fact that he had a brother who bore a striking resemblance to him. The expectations were fully met. Schwindt for the first time made public his story of the visit to Eisenhower's house one night last August and emphatically denied that there were any grounds upon which the prisoner could base jealousy. Eisenhower's daughters and sons next followed, but in their testimony left a vacancy. They were not present when Eisenhower and Schwindt had the struggle. They had gone upstairs just before that, in fact one of the sons was asleep and did not even hear the disturbance. The only story thus told concerning the struggle is that which comes from William Schwindt. There were but two other witnesses of the affair—Mrs. Eisenhower, the prisoner's wife, and the prisoner himself. In his opening address to the jury Congressman Brumm promised he would put the prisoner on the witness stand before the close of the case. Mrs. Eisenhower is still missing, and it is stated that she is not likely to take any part in the trial, so the story of the struggle and the immediate circumstances that led up to it will hinge upon the statements of William Schwindt and his would-be murderer.

In this connection there was an important development late yesterday afternoon in the testimony of William Fishburn, of Shenandoah, employed as watchman at the Turkey Run colliery. He was called ostensibly to testify to the good character of the prisoner prior to the shooting and said that for peace and order he never heard Eisenhower's reputation questioned up to the shooting. But after this Mr. Brumm put the following question to the witness: "Tell whether or not Mrs. Eisenhower acknowledged to you that she was sitting on Schwindt's lap and that she had five bullets prepared for her husband?"

The question caused a ripple of excitement. Mr. Whalen objected, but the court overruled him, and the witness answered that he had been trying to get Mr. and Mrs. Eisenhower together again and that last summer, after the difficulty, Mrs. Eisenhower told the witness, in the presence of the latter's family and Mr. Eisenhower, that she did sit on Schwindt's lap on the night of the difficulty. She said that Schwindt pulled her down on his lap as she was passing and asked her to put the light down, and she did it, but she was very sorry and had no intention of anything wrong. The witness added that Mrs. Eisenhower stated that she admitted this for peace sake.

Mr. Fishburn was subjected to a rigid examination by the Commonwealth, but his evidence was unshaken.

MR. BRUMM'S ADDRESS.

In his opening address to the jury Mr. Brumm said that never in the history of Shenandoah county has there been such a peculiar case as this one in its criminal courts. Mr. Brumm spoke for about 45 minutes and his address was an able one. Towards the close he said he would show that Eisenhower was under the influence of insanity—let it be emotional, or any other kind, of insanity the jury may see fit to call it after the evidence had been submitted at the time of the shooting, and was not responsible for the act; that William Schwindt had alienated the affections of Mrs. Eisenhower and the children from the prisoner; had driven Eisenhower upon the world heartbroken and almost an outlaw; that Schwindt did that, knowing that Eisenhower knew it, and persisted in it after he knew the trouble he had brought upon the poor man.

The first witness called for the defense was Mrs. William Arthurson, of Ringtown Valley, who said she came from South Wales two years ago and testified: "On 17th of February, last, I walked from Ringtown on my way to Shenandoah and when passing Krebs' station I saw the prisoner as I looked back behind me pulling his hair, bumping his head and hammering himself fearfully. He was talking in German and I didn't know what he was saying. I was frightened and allowed the man to pass me. He went ahead and I lost track of him until the afternoon, when I saw him on Main street. He then looked wild. On cross-examination Mrs. Arthurson said I saw the prisoner at a surprise party given to his mother in Slabtown on February 14th. The prisoner on that occasion talked very foolishly and took no part in the festivities. Among the things he said was that nobody goes to heaven after 12 years of age. When I met Eisenhower on Main street, Shenandoah, at 3 o'clock on the afternoon of February 17th, there was nothing in the look of the man to cause me to think there was anything wrong with his mind.

The defense then proceeded to bring out testimony to show the good reputation of Eisenhower for peace and good order. In some instances fair success was met with. In one the witness made a strong point for the Commonwealth. As far as their personal knowledge went the witnesses testified very favorably to the prisoner, but when questioned as to his reputation, that is, what others said of him, most of the witnesses weakened.

Daniel Gilbert, of Ringtown, said he had known the prisoner 5 or 6 years and knew nothing against him prior to the shooting, but he heard some people say good things about the prisoner, and others the reverse. The had reports he heard were that the prisoner was not good to his family and that he quarreled in saloons. These reports the witness heard before and after the shooting. Jeremiah Boughney said he knew the pris-

There were but two passengers, John M. Hubler and Mrs. Schappel, both of Gordon. When opposite the Lawrence colliery they jumped from the coach, the former sustained two scalp wounds and was badly injured about the legs, while the latter was also slightly injured. The driver stuck to his post and got control of the horses at the bottom of the hill.

SENATOR TELLER'S FAREWELL !

Senators Dubois and Cannon Join Him in His Voluntary Retirement, and Representative Hartman Follows—A Test Vote in the Convention.

Special to EVENING HERALD.

ST. LOUIS, June 18, 4:30 p. m.—From the moment that Chairman Thurston called the Republican national convention to order this morning, much excitement was apparent. The reports of the credential and resolution committees occupied most of the morning session.

The minority report of the platform, as presented by the Silverites, was laid on the table in the shape of an amendment to the report of the majority. The vote was 518; years and 100; nays.

The platform was then adopted. The convention went wild over the declaration against the free coinage of silver. Cheer upon cheer followed the reading of the clause when the gold standard was mentioned. The delegations rose in body and cheered.

The boom for Governor Morton, of New York, for Vice President, was nipped in the bud to-day, when the Governor withdrew and would not allow his name to be used in that connection. Senator Cullom also withdrew his name.

The nominating speeches began at the date of this telegram. McKinley, Reed and Morton were placed in nomination for President. In nominating Morton Mr. Depew said that the former could not accept the nomination for Vice President unless it came to him unannounced.

ST. LOUIS, June 18.—When Temporary Chairman Fairbanks called the second day's session of the Republican national convention to order he found it required some exertion to bring the crowd to a realization of the fact that this was a business rather than a social gathering, but he succeeded finally in bringing quietness, and the proceedings were begun with a prayer by Rev. Dr. W. G. Williams, of the Union Methodist church.

Senator Sewell and Congressman Payne escorted Senator Thurston to the chair, and when the applause which greeted his appearance had subsided the permanent chairman made a lengthy address, which was punctuated all the way through with applause. Special enthusiasm was manifested when Chairman Thurston referred to the fact that the convention had met for the purpose of nominating the next president; when he spoke of protection not only of American industries, but of the right of every citizen of the nation to vote; his reference to a vigorous foreign policy and the enforcement of the Monroe doctrine; that part of the address which dealt with pensions for disabled soldiers of the war and their widows, and his allusion to protection against the encroachments of combinations and monopoly.

As Chairman Thurston recalled the fact that he had presided over the convention of 1888, which nominated the last victorious ticket, and predicted that he was now presiding over one which would nominate the next president of the United States, the enthusiasm lasted for several moments. On Tuesday the mention of the names of the great leaders of the party evoked no demonstration. Yesterday it was like applying a match to a powder magazine to mention a distinguished name, and several times when there was no occasion the exuberant galleries concluded their explosions with a chorus of shouts for McKinley.

When Chairman Thurston had concluded he was presented with a magnificent

TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN FAIRBANKS, cent dorsal shield, and the galleries joined the convention in a great roar, which continued until, with persistent effort, Chairman Thurston drove out of the hall with his gavel.

After the reading of a message from the committee on credentials that it was not yet ready to report the convention adjourned until 2 p. m.

The afternoon session was opened with prayer by Bishop Arnett, the well known colored divine, of Wilberforce college. Mr. Madden, of the Illinois delegation, presented the chairman with a gavel made from an oak log taken from a house formerly occupied by Abraham Lincoln, which the chairman acknowledged in a graceful speech. Then came a gavel from the Kentucky delegation, presented by Mr. Henry and made from ash wood taken from the old homestead of Henry Clay. Temporary Chairman Fairbanks responded to the presentation speech. The Minnesota delegation, through Mr. Torrance, presented a table made by Minne-
