The Nebraska grasshoppers captured the prize.

And the convention refused to endorse the Democratic administration.

It is observable that the smile the Democrats of this vicinity now wear is not a bland one.

Now THEY MEADOW has been made into a thorough it is time to say adieu to that out rageous name.

As DAVID B. HILL left the Democratic National Convention the question arises is he still a Democrat.

The Hazleton Plain Speaker says "The decision of the local school keepers to close hereafter on Sundays as generally commended." By the way, haven't the Hazleton people heard of the Brooks license law, or is it a novelty so far as they are concerned?

THE HERALD was eagerly sought last evening, as its telegram announcing the vote for Presidential Candidate at the Chicago Convention was the only news of the kind published. The public are learning to appreciate the fact that the HERALD is up to the times.

BYRAN served two terms in Congress, where he showed of well as a spell-binder. What he had to say was of the frosty style—rather pretentious, and not unpleasing to listen to, but lacking in depth. What there is in him that should be named as a candidate for the White House is one of the curious coincidences of these rather curious times in politics.

With such nominations to the Republican party as the New York Sun, Herald, Times and States Zeitung, Brooklyn Eagle, Philadelphia Times and Record and a dozen others of nearly equal prominence it is not hard to predict the outcome in November. But the silverites will have all the louder that they are bought up by the gold bugs—and that they alone, like the Pharisees of old, are the only honest and immaculate ones.

THE ISSUE.

As was expected the Populistic wing of the Democratic party, led by Tillman, Altgeld & Co., carried everything before it at Chicago yesterday, and William J. Bryan, of Nebraska, was named for President, and from this date until the third of November, denunciations of the "money-lending oligarchy" and all the rest of the soul-stirring phrases originated by the wild visionaries of the West will be repeated ad nauseam by their followers. The outcome is all that the most ardent free silverite could desire, and stands squarely upon the platform adopted. The lines are now distinctly drawn and the voters of the country will decide whether they want a protective tariff and its beneficial effect upon American labor, reciprocity, and the maintenance of our currency at its present high standard in all the commercial centres of the world, as advocated by the Republican party, or whether they believe that the unlimited coinage of silver and its consequent depreciation as the logical result, is the remedy for the ills from which the country has suffered for some time past. The conservative Democrats were practically driven out of the convention by the Populistic wing and it will not be surprising if another ticket would be placed in nomination by them. The fight in the convention was between the South and the silver states combined against the North, and we believe the people will put the seal of condemnation upon it, as the great American public is not to be hoodwinked by the slip-trap of visionaries but will do as they did in 1894 when they showed their appreciation of the statesmanship of the Democratic party by sending the largest Republican majority to Congress that party has had in many years. They tried an experiment with the Democratic party in 1892, tried it in the balance, found it wanting, condemned it in 1894 and will complete the work by an overwhelming majority in 1896. The Greenback craze died a natural death; the free silver one will do the same. The orators of the former shrieked as loudly of the oppression of the money power as the other is doing now. The country has the best currency in the world and the more it is discussed the more firmly will the voters become convinced that it is not the currency so much as the tariff that will improve the condition of labor. There is no use trying to brush away the hard times caused by the Wilson tariff act by promises that free silver will remedy the evil, as the American workman is too intelligent to be misled in that manner and we predict the election of the Republican ticket in November by a tremendous majority.

If made pure, rich, red and vitalized by Hood's Sarsaparilla, it carries health instead of disease, and repairs the worn, nervous system as nothing else can do. Thus nervous prostration, hysteria, neuralgia, heart palpitation, are cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

BRYAN NOMINATED.

The gray haired leaders saw and feared it. When he was placed in nomination, those who thought they had found their candidate were confirmed in their opinion. The idea which George Fred Williams, of Massachusetts, conveyed in his scorching speech that it needed the strength of youth to endure the hardships of a new cause, that a young man should wield the scepter of an indignant people, rank home. Here, as Williams said, was the new Cicero to meet the new Catalines of today. The leaders who doubted the wisdom of nominating so young and inexperienced a man tried to check the stampede by adjourning. They hoped a night's reflection would suffice. At the suggestion of an adjournment there was rebellion. The speaker declared against a adjournment, and the nomination of Bryan was carried by a vote of 150 to 100.

Chairman White had recovered his voice when the time arrived for the opening session of the fourth day of the convention, but it was 10:57, nearly an hour late, when he introduced Rev. Dr. Green to offer prayer. Then came further speeches endorsing the nomination of the various candidates. Delegate Miller, of Oregon, added the name of Governor Connaway to the list, and the call of states began. The name of Connecticut was followed by a silence and the clerk passed on to Florida. After its scattering vote had been announced, ex-Governor Waller arose and shouted that two, and two only, of Connecticut's vote would be cast, and those for ex-Governor William E. Russell, John A. Salsbury, of Delaware, voted for Bryan and three others from the state for Patterson. Bryan's first cheer was given at the announcement of Georgia's solid vote for him. The forty-eight votes of Illinois for Bland were loudly cheered.

Indiana and Iowa in succession cast their solid votes for their favorite son, Matthews and Boles, respectively. Senator Foraker of Kansas, cast the solid vote of the sunflower state for Missouri's great orator, Richard P. Bland. As the chairman of each delegation announced the vote there was applause from the auditors of the different candidates. When Michigan was reached ten gold delegates refused to vote, and the silver vote was divided between Bryan, Boles and Bland. Mississippi's vote for Bryan and Missouri's for Bland were cheered. Nebraska's announcement of 16 votes for "the silver knight of the west," William J. Bryan, created great enthusiasm. New Hampshire's reply was that Delegate Doyle voted for Patterson, and the other seven delegates declined to vote, and the intelligence fell on a silent hour.

It remained for New Jersey to stir the first really sensational passage. McDermott shouted in stentorian tones: "The state of New Jersey respectfully declines to vote." This provoked a storm of hisses, and the gold adherents in the galleries attempted to drown the disapproval with their cheers, but were unable to do so.

New York refused to vote. New York was listened for as the crucial point of gold on whose action the Democracy of the east was depending for its keynote. Ex-Governor Flower said: "In view of the platform adopted by this convention, and of its action and proceedings, I am instructed by the delegation from the state of New York to say that we decline further to participate in the selection of a candidate for president and vice president, and therefore we decline to vote."

The great body of New York's adherents in the galleries sent up a storm of approval, but other cries were heard of "put me out, put me out."

Ohio cast 46 votes under the unit rule for John R. McLean. Oregon cast her 8 votes for Penoyer. Pennsylvania her 64 votes for Patterson amid the cheers of the galleries. South Carolina 17 of her votes for Tillman, while the crowds hissed.

A big row occurred when Wisconsin was called. General Brazg announced he was instructed by the majority of the Wisconsin delegation to cast no vote. One of the silver delegates challenged this and insisted on a call of the roll of the state. The result was that nineteen delegates refused to vote; one voted for Binkburn and four for Bland.

The name of Henry M. Teller was for the first time spoken as a possible presidential nominee in the convention, when, on the call of states passed Colorado, eight votes were recorded for the former Republican, and were received with mingled cheers and hisses.

On the second roll Alabama shifted her 22 votes from the Bland camp to Bryan, and the young Nebraskan's friends waved their handkerchiefs. Bryan gained three in the California delegation on a poll. Colorado's vote for Teller was again hissed and hissed by the majority of the Massachusetts delegates voted—for Patterson, 4; Stevenson, 2; Bland, 1; Hill, 1; Bryan, 1.

The clerk consumed several minutes in computing the results of the first ballot during which the crowd buzzed excitedly. Senator White's voice had been falling him and Richardson, of Tennessee, again took the gavel during this intermission. The request of the chairman that parties refrain from cheering was complied with, and strangely enough there was no demonstration when the vote was announced.

A gain for the Nebraska man. On the second roll Alabama shifted her 22 votes from the Bland camp to Bryan, and the young Nebraskan's friends waved their handkerchiefs. Bryan gained three in the California delegation on a poll. Colorado's vote for Teller was again hissed and hissed by the majority of the Massachusetts delegates voted—for Patterson, 4; Stevenson, 2; Bland, 1; Hill, 1; Bryan, 1.

The name of Minnesota on the second call brought a shout from Daniel Lawler: "Minnesota on this and every other ballot, present and not voting!"

As the vote was being counted the band discoursed a solemn air to give the clerks another opportunity to practice addition. In the meantime many voices from the galleries called "Hurray for Bryan," and one shouted calling "What's the matter with Bryan?" being answered by many voices "He's all right."

Delegate Marsden, of Louisiana, was on his feet again the moment order was announced with a motion to adjourn.

two-thirds rule, which he had previously offered. The galleries recognized in the late Louisiana the man who distinguished himself on the first day of the convention by developing an unquenchable thirst for water. They were convulsed with laughter and yelled themselves hoarse. Some one got him a glass of water and he gulped it in full view of 20,000 screaming people. He then mounted the platform and again went straight to the water pitcher, where he again sloshed his burning throat while the convention roared about at his jet like a man in a fit. The motion was dashed out of order and Marsden left the platform, while friends rushed up bearing water.

On third call there was a storm of hisses when New York declined to vote, but this was the only incident of note during the call.

Bryan's people went wild at the beginning of the fourth roll call, when Alabama changed her twenty-two votes from Bland to Bryan. The Nebraska delegates climbed to their chairs and led a cheer Idaho followed suit by bringing her six votes from Bland to Bryan. Other states joined the procession, and when the vote was read the reading clerk got no further than that the announcement of Bryan's 280 votes before there was a repetition of the scene of Thursday, when the eloquent young orator closed his speech.

The Coliseum swayed with enthusiasm. Cheers followed cheer. The state standards were again uprooted and carried to Nebraska. Louder and louder the whirl of sound swelled. Men and women went frantic. Hundreds of newspapers and umbrellas were furiously whirled through the air. Suddenly two beautiful young girls dressed in pink appeared on a table back of the alternate seats in the valley of Democracy. They held in their hands a large silk flag, on one side of which shone the clear-cut features of Bryan. To and fro it waved while 20,000 throats yelled and serene. The man prevailed; he could not be heard above the Niagara-like war. The dunes of the purple state quailed about the Nebraska golden standard for five minutes. Then they started in Indian file to parade the standards about the delegates.

Pandemonium breaks loose. For fourteen minutes the pandemonium continued. Throughout it all Mrs. Bryan sat to the right of the platform. Although a bright look of pleasure lighted her features, she did not appear at all excited by this wonderful demonstration in honor of her distinguished husband. She is a rather small, sweet faced woman, with soft brown eyes and hair. She was dressed simply in a gown of dark material. The only bit of color about her was a little bunch of deep purple in her black hair. No one in the vicinity seemed to recognize in this little calm faced woman the helpmeet of the hero of the hour.

Chairman White said that the proceedings had reached such a stage that it became necessary to announce his construction of the two-thirds rule. It was that two-thirds of the votes given were necessary to a nomination. California went solid for Bryan, as did Florida and Kentucky.

The enthusiasm was aroused again when Big "Buck" Hirschman called out the 25 of Illinois for Bryan, the most important desertion from Bland. Then John R. McLean appeared in a chair holding a cane aloft, while under him the other leaders seemed to be quaking. "Ohio withdraws the name of McLean," said that gentleman and casts 46 votes for Bryan.

Governor Stone, of Missouri, stern-faced and dark-browed, fixed the audience on the platform.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he began, with a gesture for silence; "I have received this note from Richard Parks Bland. An impressive hush fell upon the whole multitude as he deliberated, with a full pause after each word, he read the note. It was addressed to Governor Stone, and was as follows:

I wish it to be understood that I do not want the nomination unless it is the judgment of the free silver delegates, that I would be the strongest candidate. If it should at any time appear that my candidacy is an obstruction to the nomination of any candidate who is acceptable to the free silver delegates in the convention or one more acceptable to a majority of those delegates than myself, I wish my name at once withdrawn from further consideration. I am willing to obey state instructions for me and let the free silver delegates decide the matter. But the issue above none.

Governor Stone joins the procession. The note having been finished he spoke of how he had come to this city to conduct the campaign for the great summer, but now bowed to the will of the party. "In the name of Missouri," he said, "I lower the standard under which we have fought throughout this convention and in its place I lift that of the gifted and glorious son of Nebraska. Gentlemen, we have chosen a splendid leader," he said, and went on to pay tribute to the Nebraskan as a great orator, a great scholar, but above all, bearing in his breast a heart that throbs in sympathy with the great masses.

The hand stowed away in the left over the speaker's head broke into the bars of "Columbia." Cannon boomed their accompaniment outside. Probably the happiest woman in the world at that moment was the one sitting in the front row of the platform, about whom pressed noted men and women to take her hand in congratulation.

Confusion reigned throughout the building, with delegates upon their chairs clamoring to change their votes amid a fierce hum of surprise and speculation.

Then Delegate Van Wagon, of Iowa, crowded to the platform. In impressive tones he said that Governor Boles also placed the cause above the man, and he, too, cast the vote of his state for Bryan. Other states tumbled into the foaming wake. Montana and West Virginia changed their votes amid great enthusiasm and confusion.

Senator Turpie, of Indiana, withdrew the name of Matthews and moved that the nomination be made unanimous. Delegate McDermott demanded a call of the states. There was no second to Mr. McDermott's demand, however, and then Chairman White declared the motion carried. Another wild scene followed. Again the guidons were torn from their sockets and paraded about.

Boles and Bland banners, flags of all description, gathered about the standard of Nebraska. The standard of New York, Pennsylvania, Delaware, New Jersey and all the gold states were left standing. In the midst of the confusion on Senator Jones' motion, at 3:30 p. m., the convention adjourned until 8 o'clock.

A Short Night Session. CHICAGO, July 11.—The crowds who stormed the Coliseum last night in anticipation of another oratorical display such as they listened to Thursday night, were doomed to disappointment, as the leaders had decided, after consultation, not to proceed with the nomination of the vice president until today. But, all unconcerned to this determination, the public pushed in to their places in the bewildering galleries. At 8:55 Chairman White, by dint of much wrapping, managed to bring the convention to order.

After a formal announcement by the chair, General Brazg of Wisconsin, appeared on the stage to make a personal explanation. He complained that in the afternoon session the Wisconsin state colors had been stolen and carried in the Bryan parade. He wanted it understood that "we trailed not the Wisconsin banner behind the candidate of the majority of this convention." He was roundly hissed. When Governor Stone moved to adjourn until today there was a howl of protest, especially from spectators, and the call of states on the motion was demanded. It prevailed, and at 9:30 p. m. the convention adjourned until 10 o'clock to-day.

A WIDELY known Wisconsin publisher, who resides at Green Bay, writes March 6th, 1886, as follows:

"Five years ago I became so nervous that mental work was a burden. I could not rest at night on account of sleeplessness. My attention was called to Dr. Miles' Restorative Nerve, and I commenced to use it with the very best effect. Since then I have kept a bottle in my house and use it whenever my nerves become unstrung, with always the same good results. My son also takes it for nervousness with like never failing success. I have recommended it to many and it cures them. All who suffer from nerve troubles should try it. It is free from narcotics, perfectly harmless, and yet soothes and strengthens. Dr. Miles, through his Nerve is a benefactor to thousands."
