ust outside this city, and as a result about a hundred persons are either killed or in Jured. The Reading rallroad express which left Philadelphia at 5 40 o'clock last evening crashed into a Pennsylvania excursion train at the second signal tower, about four miles from here. The Penn-sylvania train was returning to Bridgeton with a party of excursionists from that place. Millville and neighboring towns It was loaded with passengers, and a rough estimate of the killed and injured at a late hour places the number at 100. It is hoped that this is an exaggeration, but the number is undoubtedly more than fifty.

City relief trains were dispatched to the scene, loaded with cots and hearing staffs scene, loaded with cots and bearing statis of surgeons. As quick as the bodies were recovered they were carried into the load hospitals and undertakare shops. A gent and fire alarm was sounded and the de-partment promptly responded and aided in the work of digging for the victims. The first Reading relief train bore into the site transformers and for the state and most celebrated in the state. Engineer Faithful Unto Death. Edward Farr, engineer on the Heading train, was killed ourright, as was another road man who role on the engine with him. This man, whose name has not yet been learned, saw the collision coming and leaped from the cab an instant before the crash. Almost at the same time the origine cut its way through and cought him directly in its path. His body and that of Farr were found under a beap of debris, but the engineer lay in what remained of the cab, and his right band still chapted the throttle. He had been faithful unto death, and not it at his post.
