MANY VICTIMS OF THE HEAT

The Terrible Mortality in and About New York City.

PATROL WAGONS AS AMBULANCES

The Hospitals Unable to Furnish Transportation For the Dead and Dying. Are Obligated to Call Upon the Police Department for Aid.

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—The number of deaths caused by the heat in greater New York yesterday is about a hundred, and additional victims are being recorded hourly. The prostrations are almost innumerable, and no accurate estimate of them can be made. Ambulances and patrol wagons were running about all day, the clamor of their gongs becoming a familiar sound. Street car horses dropped in the tracks by scores. Out-of-door work was largely suspended and many factories are temporarily closed. Sunday night was the hottest of the summer, the climax of the present torrid spell, and one of the hottest known in the city for years. Morning brought no relief, and at 8 a. m. the thermometer stood five degrees higher than the same time Sunday, but as the humidity was less intense than on the preceding day there was less discomfort in the atmosphere. Early in the morning there was but 50 per cent of humidity, which is rather below the normal.

The official record of temperature at 8 a. m. was 82 degrees; at 4 p. m., 93. Those tests were taken on the top of one of the highest buildings in the city. The street temperature, taken in the shade at a point near the center of the city, was 89 at 9 a. m., rose to 97 at 11, to 99 at 1 p. m., to 102 at 3, and at 6 had fallen to 97, and further decreased to 89 at 9 p. m.

Suffering has been most intense in the tenements, where poor people are unable to get breathing space. In these sections the charitable organizations have had their hands full, many infants and children succumbing to sunstroke. The hospitals were obliged to call on the police department to aid them in responding to calls, as their ambulances could not cope with the number of cases reported. So police patrol wagons were pressed into service to carry heat victims to the hospitals. Many other wagons were used to carry away dead and disabled animals.

Following is a list of the deaths yesterday: Charles Swanson, 40 years old; Peter Brady, 38; Samuel Beckman, 8; John Zoga, 35; Martin McGowan, 85; Thomas McFadden, 48; Marie Kelly, 51; Ellen Sullivan, 39; T. Special Herald Correspondence.

POTTSVILLE, August 11.

The Democratic county convention of 1896 is a thing of the past. The "unterrified" have met and adjourned, and the result is anything but pleasant to the rank and file of the party. In fact, they had very little to do with naming the gentlemen whose names appear upon the ticket. The Democratic party in this county is controlled "body and breeches" by a combine in this town, as has been fully demonstrated by the events of yesterday.

The combine selected Hon. James E. Brennan, of South Cass, as their candidate for chairman of the convention, while those candidates who had not been slated presented the name of R. S. Bashore, Esq., of Tremont. The latter was selected, and many are of the belief that had the convention followed this up with a vote for Congress previous to the noon adjournment the personnel of the ticket would be different from what it is, and that ex-District Attorney Ryan would have been nominated for Congress. He is in closer touch with the silver sentiment of the party, while Shephard has been looked upon as in sympathy with the conservative element of the party.

The Shenandoah representatives were greatly interested in the vote on Proclamationary, for which office Harry Bradigan has been a conditional candidate for a week or so, although public announcement was only made the day before the convention and after he had been slated by the combine. For this reason the friends of Mullaney, Brennan and McGinnis feel that they were not treated fairly, especially after they had made an open and square fight and spent their money in making a canvass. Many threats were made yesterday after Bradigan had been nominated, and if the bitter feeling that now exists does not abate before the date of election the returns from north of the mountain will surprise those who were in control of yesterday's convention.

A strong effort was made to break the slate, but it was successful in only one instance, and that was because of Philip J. Connell's personal strength. Although the latter was not slated, those who were in the combine, with the probable exception of a young man from the Casses by the name of Curran, realized that that was the weakest point, and that if the combine went down it would be on Clark of the Courts.

It was the hardest fight of the day. During the voting the feeling was intense. Every five minutes the delegates would become involved in some dispute and the chairman would have to suspend business until the Sergeant-at-arms restored order. The feeling was so bitter at one time that a small riot was barely averted. Editor Joyce brought forth the ire of Delegate Kenney, of Girardville, who declared that "no Republican editor had any right to take part in the proceedings," and he wanted the American's quill pushed ejected from the hall. The latter was soon surrounded by a small mob, but during all this time the Burke Cochran of Schuylkill Republicanism was as calm and composed as a Jersey mosquito. He was not ejected.

Curran's friends take their defeat hard, and it will require all the ingenuity and persuasive powers of the leaders to heal the sore. The fact that Folmer and Curran were both defeated three years ago, and the former was again nominated while the latter was turned down, causes Curran's friends to accept their treatment with bitter feelings.

Notwithstanding the fact that it was clearly shown that P. J. Ferguson, he of other than Auburn hair and hailing not from Shenandoah, "knifed" the ticket when Leary was a candidate, he was placed on the ticket. It was the will of the combine, and that was law yesterday. Watch the returns from the Mahanoy valley the morning after election, when it will be seen that it does not always pay to be "crooked."

There is no question but that hoodie played an important part in carrying through the slate. This is nothing unusual, however, as the same "motive power" was resorted to last Monday a week. In fact, politics has become so degraded in this county that it is almost necessary for a man to have a lank account to be nominated.

While there is much dissatisfaction among the friends of the defeated candidates from Shenandoah, the men who managed the canvass of young Bradigan are to be congratulated for the successful termination of the contest. Prominent among these was Charles J. Quinn, James F. O'Haren, F. J. and James Cleary.

The heat was intense in the convention hall. So much so that the nomination of Bradigan caused Mike Doyle to disappear. When he again returned he was bedecked in a new crash suit. The latter began to witter when Martin was named for Commissioner. Such is politics—mighty uncertain.

The ticket nominated has its elements of strength as well as weakness, and as the campaign progresses this will be manifested. It was certainly a compliment to George

Herbert C. Hooks, one of the public school teachers of this town, and Miss Margaret Ello, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Heaton, of Lost Creek, were married at noon to-day at the residence of the bride's parents, and in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends. Rev. Alfred Heebner, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, of town, officiated at the ceremony. The bride was attended by Miss Hattie Nicholls, of Lost Creek, and Miss Lillian Beddall, of Wm. Penn; and the bridegroom by his brother, Mr. Elmer A. Hooks, of Pottsville, and E. W. Shoemaker, Esq., of town. The presents to bride and bridegroom were elaborate and profuse. Immediately after the ceremony a sumptuous dinner was served and at 3:47 this afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Hooks started on the bridal tour, which will embrace a visit to Philadelphia and Niagara Falls. In order to avoid the practical joker the bridegroom shipped his trunk from Lost Creek for Philadelphia early this morning, but the jokers were alert enroute and when the trunk was transferred in town it was covered with humorous phrases in chalk to let the public know that it belonged to a newly married couple.
