"I AM NOT A DEMOCRAT.

On March 17, 1896, the Hon. William Jennings Bryan declared at Mount Vernon, Ill.; "I am not a Democrat."

What have Democrats to do with a man who has proclaimed that he is not a Domocrat; who repeatedly boasted of his intention not to support a gold candidate or a gold platform; and who is now, after two years or more of intriguing with the Populists, the Populist candidate on a Populist platform?

THE coming convention of the National Democracy is needed, for one thing, to set Grover Cleveland right in history. His portrait was turned to the wall by revolutionists In Chicago, but it will not go into the record that the party made the dead unanimous,

The rosy-hued promises of plenty and prosperity made by the Free-Trade leaders in 1892 have duffed to the dark reality of hard times, lower wages, and no work. The colors on the Free-Trade palette are as bright to-day as they were in 1862-brighter ambed the dark background of these Tariff Reform hard times-but the voters are better informed in cratic delegates; they can ignore the tworegard to the staying qualities of the colors

That is to say, the first step in the scheme of making life easier for those who are now sorely pressed in the matter of paying for the necessaries of life is to raise the prices of all such articles.

But the additional carrency would not be gratuitously distributed to the people. They would have to work for it just us they do now, and would receive only so much of it in exchange for their laborus their employers were willing to pay them. In other words, the prices of food, fuel, clothing and so on would be raised, but it would not be in their power to raise their wages. As a matter of fact, therefore, the claim that the result of free coinage would be an increase of prices may be regarded as a conclusive reason why those who work for wages or salaries should vote against it. Mr. Bland tells them that they would certainly have to pay more for everything that they buy, but he does not give them any assurance of increased means to meet this additional expense. They have nothing to sell but their labor. That is their only source of profit, their only dependence for a living. Obviously, their advantage lies in being able to buy as much as possible with the money that they receive for their services. Their wages are now higher than these of the working people of any other country, and the money in which they are paid has a greater purchasing power than has ever before been known.

An increase of the prices of all commodities uplies a reduction of that purchasing power; or, to state it in another way, the cheapersing of the money received for labor means a comming of wages, and there is no reason whatever to believe that such a loss would be made good by a general increase of wages equal to the advance in the cost of living. So when Mr. Bland proclaims that he and ds party are striving to increase the prices of all commodities, he practically admits that no wage carner can afford to vote for
