WAS A BREEZY CONVENTION.

Mr. Platt's Name Not Presented or Voted For.

WARNER MILLER NOT ADMITTED

Objection Made to Even Allow Mr. Miller
to Address the Convention, but Mr.
Platt Moved That the Gentleman be Heard.

SAHATOGA, Aug. 25.—The delegates to the Republican state convention were early in reaching the hall, and by noon there was a big gathering of prominent men from all parts of the state prepared to proceed with the work in hand. When Mr. Platt entered the hall the entire assemblage rose. The applause was deafening. Mr. Platt's usual nervousness was apparent, and when one of the bands played "Hail to the Chief" he did not look particularly pleased. As the applause subsided an enthusiastic spectator shouted: "Three cheers for Thomas C. Platt!" and the call was answered with a will. Mr. Platt stopped to shake hands with Mr. Hiseock, and then went to his seat.

Benjamin O'Neil, in the absence of State Chairman Hackett, called the convention to order and Bishop Newman offered prayer. Congressman Frank Black was selected for temporary chairman. He discussed the financial issue and criticized the Democratic platform. At the conclusion of Chairman Black's speech the usual committees were named. The committee on permanent organization met directly after adjournment, and selected General Stewart H. Woodford, of Brooklyn, as permanent chairman of the convention.

The most interesting contest before the credentials committee was that from Herkimer between Titus Sheard, the sitting delegate, and Warner Miller, the latter accusing the former of fraud. The committee's report, making the temporary roll permanent, excluded Mr. Miller from a state convention for the first time in thirty years.

When the convention reassembled the report was presented. Deputy Attorney General Hasbrouck asked for a division of the question and a separate vote on the Onondaga county case.

Then in the centre of the hall from the Herkimer county seats came Warner Miller. His face was full, and his lips trembled as from parts of the hall came cheers and from other parts hisses and yells of derision. "Get out, you don't belong here," "you are a traitor," etc., came cries from the galleries. Pandemonium arose and the chairman's gavel was almost useless to quell it. Then Otto Irving Wise, of New York, made himself heard above the din. "I object to Mr. Miller speaking. He is not on the roll of the convention."

"Then again the row arose. The galleries yelled in derision and again called names. The supporters of Saxton and Roberts cheered as a challenge to this element, and for a few minutes Mr. Miller stood silent in this storm of derision and applause. In a hush in the tumult the chairman said derisively, "From what county does the gentleman come?" and his sarcasm was greeted with cheers and a renewal of hisses and shouts.

Down in the front Thomas C. Platt, his brows knitted, started to get to his feet. In an instant there was a calm, and in his quiet voice he was heard to say: "Mr. Chairman, I hope and I move that the gentleman be heard." Organization and anti-organization joined in the applause that followed this clever escape, and the gavel of the chairman finally succeeded in restoring order.

Mr. Miller then began to speak. His remarks were dignified and not incendiary. His declaration of Republicanism, despite such treatment as might be accorded him, brought forth a storm of applause, and his declaration of loyalty to the party was similarly received.

He began his address with a mild sarcastic reference to Mr. Platt by saying: "I did not believe that this convention would refuse me a hearing. But it seems to me, sir, that it took the power of one man (Platt) to grant me that hearing, and I return to him my thanks for the courtesy of commanding this convention to give me a hearing."

He then reviewed the Herkimer county convention and the primaries to select delegates to it, declaring that gross irregularities were numerous and that in the convention he was declared defeated, yet four more votes were cast for him than for his opponent. He accepted the decision of the committee, however, and said in closing: "If you do more in this cause from now until November than I shall do, it will be only because you are stronger and more able than I am."

When Mr. Miller finished he was heartily applauded, and cries of "Miller's all right," and "what's the matter with Miller?" showed that the speech had had some effect.

Mr. Hasbrouck's motion to divide the question was defeated by a viva voce vote, and then the crowd paused in its hurrying to see the result. Mr. Miller arose, and in a composed manner walked down the aisle to the spectators' seats. There was hardly a sound either from the sneerers or the cheerers. It was a peculiar change from the earlier scene of riot and disorder.

The nomination for governor was then proceeded with. George W. Aldridge led on the first ballot with 224 votes, followed by Hamilton Fish with 111. On the second ballot Aldridge had 227; Fish, 123.

Singler of Philadelphia, A. S. Landis of Blair county, S. C. McCandless of Allegheny and John Blanchard of Centre county. William B. Given was selected for chairman of the state central committee.

His grandfather was killed in the same manner several years ago.

KNICKERBOCKER TO RESUME.

The Colliery Will be Ready to Start
Next Tuesday.

MANY MINE WORKERS WILL REJOICE

The Remodelling of the Breaker Has Been Completed Much Earlier Than Was Anticipated—At Least Five Hundred
Workers Will be Benefitted.

The people of Yatesville and Jacksons, as well as a large number of Shenandoah and Mahanoy City, will be delighted to hear that operations will be resumed at the Knickerbocker colliery, commonly called "Fowler's," at Yatesville, next Tuesday morning. The intelligence will also be surprising, as it was not expected that the extensive repairs and alterations to the breaker undertaken six weeks ago could be completed in less than three or four months. Night and day work by an extra large force of carpenters has brought the glad news much earlier than expected.

The breaker of the colliery has been so thoroughly overhauled that its old identity is almost entirely lost and it is now one of the best plants in the region. Thousands of dollars have been expended in the alterations and repairs and they have been carried out on the same lines followed in the reconstruction of the breaker at the Shenandoah City colliery. All the most modern equipments and appliances have been introduced for preparing the coal and it is expected that not only will the capacity of the colliery be increased, but the quality of the coal shipped will be correspondingly improved. One important change in the equipment is the abolishment of the screen system. All screens have been replaced by the more recent and approved shaker system. Of course there has been a general change in the chutes, etc., and the jig plant has been greatly increased to prepare the smaller coal through the washery system.

The Knickerbocker colliery is one of the largest in this part of the region and a gloom was cast over many homes when operations were suspended indefinitely six weeks ago to allow the breaker to be remodelled. The colliery gives employment, inside and outside, to from 700 to 875 men and boys and according to the last annual official report produced 206,228 tons of coal.

Odd Fellows' New Building.

North White street, in the vicinity of the new school building, has been greatly improved during the past month or two, by the erection of new buildings, and this portion of the town has become one of the most desirable locations in the borough. It is to be still further improved by the erection of a handsome brick structure on the lot recently purchased by Shenandoah Lodge No. 591, I. O. O. F., the plans and specifications for which have already been drawn up. The building will be three stories. The first and second stories will be used as dwelling houses, while the third floor will be devoted entirely to lodge purposes. There will be a hallway in the centre leading to the lodge room, which will be one of the most commodious and convenient of any hall in the town. The lodge is to be commended for its enterprise and desire to have a home of its own.

Property Improvements.

A gang of carpenters this morning commenced vigorous work on the alterations of the Muldown property, at the corner of Centre and West streets, which have been under way for several months but delayed from time to time on account of uncertainty as to plans. It has now been decided to bring the building flush with the line on Centre street and remodel it, after which the saloon will be moved to the corner and the place it now occupies will be tenanted as a grocery.
