The builliant coloring of the leaves of the trees before dropping off in the full is possible to this county, and is the wonder of visitors when they see it for the first time.

Cixir stock argument of Mr. Withelia and allverite friends is that sower has not deprecisied in price but that the price of gold has appreciated. This is bad, very bad, they high, they argue. But in the next breath that they draw they clamer for the emetment of a law that would, in their opinion immediately advance the price of silver to $1.29 per onnce—an appreciation of about 50 per cent, at one jump! In short, their whole purpose appears to be to make silver worth as much as gold, or as near that price as possible. There was a spirited financial political cropesium in one of the diving rooms of Zimberman's restaurant or the dinner hour yesterday says the Pattsville Chronicle. United States Senator Benj. R. Tillman, and his coaperon, William, Withelm, were there and so were a number of lawyers, business wen and a representative of the Chronicle. of course with Tillman and Wilbelm on laud it was natural that the conversation should drift swiftly on to the shoals and quicksands of the financial question. Tillman was in fine feather in his own peculiar way and was easily drawn out. He began to tell how free and unlimited coinage of silver would benefit all bands and how while old give the farmer more money to spend would increase values and raise wages That is, he unde that statement, for he did not present any argument to back it up. He had been discoursing on these points in a quiet conventional way for some minutes, when he was asked by the Chronicle man how labor was to benefit by giving the farmer plenty of coin. The fiery and impulsive South Carolina statesman immediately jumped to his feet and striking one of his grotesque postures yelled: "That's just like you gold bugs. You're always talking about the classes and pitting the laborer against the farmer." He became quite excited, but he didn't answer the question. Another gentleman also asked if it wasn't a fact that the wages of labor rever advanced in the same ratio as prices. Again he got on his high horse and spread issued all over the room while he heaped exective after invective on the gold bugs, at he did not advance any statement to show that the workingman's wages went, up as first as values of commodities increased.
