Statesmen in the old days got into the habit of using the term speci or metallic money of the different sorts, and this was all right in the early days of the Government, when there was a sort of an approach to equality between silver and gold. The trouble with this term is, however, that It stuck long after it had outlived its usefulness. When used in the financial discussion of the war days it always meant gold. At the time when "specie" payments were stopped, at the beginning of 1862, the American silver dullar was an unknown coin. Practically speaking, all the mefallic money the country had of denominations above 50c, exclusive of some foreign coins, was gold. The Coal Trade.

The authracite coal trade during the past week has not been particularly active, and in fact this year offers quite a material dif-ference, so far as trade conditions are concorned, from preceding years; the price has been advanced from time to time during the year until the list is now very nearly the gure at which it was at this time during su2, which was the year of the McLood sublination. The average consumer apcondination. The average consumer ap-sears to be of the opinion that the price is as righ as it will be during the winter month and for this reason be is inclined to let the producer carry the coal, which be will draw open as requirements make meressary. It is this which makes the trade at retail more so quietly as it does, and for this russon one ands, from the market reports, that the wholesale trade is not at all active. Such being the case, it would seem to be exercising the wisest degree of business prudence if the supply were not greater than the probable on hand, and if the output during the next three months should not be greater than 16,008,000 tons, we finey that this, with the dames with gray locks.
