Court Notes.
John Wilson, Gus Ganger and Thomas McDermott, the three men charged with blowing open the safe at the Quakertown colliery, were yesterday indicted by the grand jury, on oath of John McGuiness, for larceny three counts, malicious mischief, and assault and battery.
The grand jury also found two true bills of libel against J. Irvin Steele, proprietor of the Ashland Telegram, on oath of Thomas C. Heffner.

Coroner's Jury Verdict.
Deputy Coroner Manley and a jury last night held an inquest in the case of Andrew Skripas, the man who was killed on the Lehigh Valley railroad Tuesday night, and a verdict of accidental death was rendered. It appeared from the evidence that Skripas was on his way from Lost Creek, where he went to see the owner of the house his family occupies in this town about some repairs, and that he was struck by passenger train No. 230.

CHARGED WITH HORSE STEALING.

Detective Amour Arrests the Arrested and Recovers the Property.
Detective Amour yesterday accomplished a clever piece of work by taking into custody three men charged with stealing a team of horses, a loaded wagon and a load of sweet potatoes on the 2nd inst. from a man residing at Norristown. Amour was first notified of the case yesterday morning by the receipt of a warrant by mail with a letter, the latter stating that three men had left Norristown with the stolen property on the date stated and it was believed that the men had driven to this part of the state. No description of the men was given. The warrant only called for the arrest of one man and contained the additional charge of subornation.

Amour commenced work on the case at once and learned that three men traveled about west on Monday and Tuesday disposing of sweet potatoes at prices lower than the local hucksters could buy them at wholesale. It was also learned that they left town early yesterday morning, but could not be traced until late in the afternoon when Amour heard that they were selling sweet potatoes at Brownsville. He went there, but found they had left. Amour boarded an electric car and traveled to Wm. Penn, where he learned that the men had returned to Schuylkill about five hours before. The detective boarded a returning car and at the corner of Coal and Main streets overtook the sought-for team in charge of two men. Stopping the team and climbing into the wagon Amour asked the men, "Are you from Center county?" Both promptly replied that they were, whereupon Amour said, "I place you under arrest for peddling without a license." The men treated the charge lightly and said they were only working on salary for a third man and if there was any charge of that kind their boss would fix the matter up.

The Center county peddling yarn that Amour gave the men was only a mask to shield his true mission, because the third man was missing and it was suspected that he was the important one. The yarn worked effectually. The two men under arrest cheerfully accompanied Amour to their stable at the east end of Apple alley, where they un hitched and put away the horses. They then accompanied the officer to Justice Lawlor's office and were arraigned on a charge of peddling without a license. The men gave their names as Thomas and Hugh O'Brien, brothers, and residence as Philadelphia. They are poorly dressed and hard looking characters. They stated that they were in the employ of one James Wood, who had gone to Mahanoy City and promised to meet them at the stable after their return from Wm. Penn. The men were taken to the lockup and placed in a cell after many protests, although they made no resistance. They protested against being locked up on such a petty charge and evidently did not suspect the real nature of the case. They urged the officer to let them know as soon as Wood would return to town, so that he could pay the fine and have them released.

After locking up the prisoners Amour went to the stable at the northeastern outskirts of the town and engaged a man to hitch up the horses and transfer them to Niswenter's stable. Amour had there but a few minutes when a man of trampish appearance walked into the stable and up to the horses. Seeing a stranger putting on the harness he asked "What's going on here?" The newcomer proved to be James Wood and he was promptly placed under arrest. He was taken before Justice Lawlor and committed to the lockup on the real charges, pending the arrival of the complainant, Alonzo Wells, from Norristown. When Woods was placed in the cell with the other two men none made any remarks, but the trio no doubt fully arrived at an understanding of the situation when left to themselves. Woods is not a stranger here, having worked as huckster for Chambers, of Mahanoy City, a few years ago. He denies all the charges and says he can show that he is the owner of the horses and wagon.

Mr. Wells arrived from Norristown this morning and identified the three men. He said Woods and himself were in partnership in the huckster business at Norristown. On the 2nd inst. he gave Woods $522 to go to Philadelphia to purchase a load of apples and that was the last seen of the latter. (Time to-day.) Woods owns one of the horses and the other belongs to another Norristown man. Wells says Woods is wanted at Phoenixville for fraudulently removing a car load of watermelons from a railway depot at Phoenixville and at Norristown for stealing a soldier's license and $45. A Norristown officer is expected here this evening to take charge of the prisoners.

He Died Suddenly.

It appears that William Lewis, whose death at the Miners' hospital was reported in last night's issue, died very suddenly and for that reason the family in town could not be notified before the death occurred. Breakfast was served to the patients at the hospital at 6:30 o'clock yesterday morning and at that time a nurse gave Lewis a cup of coffee, which he accepted and drank. About three minutes later the nurse discovered that Lewis had left his cot and found him sitting in the sun room. He was assisted back to his bed and expired immediately. Within five minutes after he accepted the coffee he was dead.

FRIGHTENED BY A ROBBER.

Mrs. Schmecker's Illness Greatly Aggravated by a Robber.
Mrs. Anthony Schmecker, of South Main street, suffers from cancer of the breast. For the past three weeks she has been confined to her bed. At three o'clock yesterday morning she discovered a strange young man sitting in the room in her bedroom. The intruder placed the muzzle of a revolver close to her head and warned her not to make any outcry. The robber left without saying a word. Mrs. Schmecker made an outcry that attracted the attention of her husband, who was in the bathroom. He stated that the robber was a young man known as "Cutey" Colton. Mrs. Schmecker was so badly frightened that her illness became greatly aggravated. This morning it was feared she would die and her relatives were summoned to the bedside. Later in the day her condition improved. Her sister, Miss M. Hale, says that most of the time she appears to be in a delirium and clutches at what she supposes to be a burglar stooping over her. No warrant has been issued for Colton's arrest and Mr. Schmecker does not appear to be disposed to press the case.
