LORD SALISBURY SPEAKS

The British Premier Discusses the Arbitration Treaty.

IT WILL NOT AVERT WARFARE

But It Will Prove an Invaluable Bulwack to Protect Executive Officers Against Jingmes, and Will Lead to Other Improved Methods of Arbitration,

London, Jan. 20. After the reading of the queen's speech in the house of lords yesterday, and the usual opening exercises, the Marquis of Salisbury delivered his address on the policy of the government. Regarding the arbitration treaty with the United States the premier said: I cannot spank as freely as I desire on the arbitration treaty, because it has not been ratified. But I do not think there is need to expend much effort in convincing need to expend much effort in convincing Lord Kimberley on that subject. He probably agreed with me as beartily as anybody concerning the advantages such a treaty may confer, and I am bound to say I am picking up the thread which fell from his hands about two years ago. I can only observe that you must not think we are indulging in millenial anticipations if we hope that something will be done by the treaty of arbitration to diminish the risks of war. I do not say it will restrain a Napolson or a Bismarch. But, diploa Napolson or a Bismarck. But, diplo-macy is full of an infinite number of small lifferences which are camplet by the poople and press of both countries, and if they are written upon, exaggerated and en-larged, they tend to diminish the friend-ship between the countries and give birth o a feeling of alisnation and resentment. "The power of going immediately to a iribunal to settle those things will pro-vont a process so injurious to the good will of nations, especially between iwo nations who understand each other unfortunately too well, that if we are not friends we should be countles.

"But there is still a greater advantage in the existence of the arbitration system, and that arises from the prevalence of sopular institutions in most of the countries of the world, where there are ministers who govern and members of parli-ment and others who criticise them, and this body generally contains one class of whom I desire to speak with all respect. They are known popularly as jingoes.
They are very patriotic, and their warmth of patriotism sometimes clouds their appreciation of details. But they exist in all countries, and you will always find that one of the principal subjects which preoccupied the minister is how to furnish an account of the matter which s soothing to this vary excitable portion of his critics.

"It is my belief that a wall working ar-"It is my belief that a wall working arbitration system will prove an invaluable butwark to defend the minister from such criticism. Is would be impossible to accuse him of triking with the honor of the country or surrendering a substantial advantage if he could say that he had substantial the matter to an impartial tributter to an impartial tributter. mitted the matter to an impartial trib-unal, and, unfortunately, the decision had been against him. It is impossible not to feel that the ministers could negotiate with a freer hand and more determination if they were absolutely secure from danger of such interference. I do not say this with reference to our country, because here, less than elsowhere, is a minister's here, tess than closewhere, to a minister a hand forced by such."

Lord Salisbury then dwelt upon the in-creasing military bardens of the countries of the world, and the danger that the nations would rush into war in order to end their sufferings. He concluded by saying: "I do not say that an arbitration system will end this, but while the coil is growing it is our duty to make an effort to devise a system which will in some degree be a subject for this rulnous necessity, and which will apply to public law that remedy which was applied to private war centuries ago.

"I believe that the measures which we have taken will be principally of value in this, and will lend to other measures of the same kind. And we, or those who come after us, will have the advantage of seeing the necessity of vast armaments gradually disappear before the growth of that which we have come to consider a necountry of civilized life, namely, the substitution of judicial decisions for the dread of the arbitrament of the sword. I hope this effort, small as it is, will be suc-cessful, and that those who come after us will have the happiness of carrying a similar effort to an equally successful conclusion in future days."

In the house of commons Sir William to the house of commons Sir William Vernen Harcourt criticised the advance of the Angio-Egyptiau expedition up the Nils, and asked for an explanation from the government of its Egyptian policy. He dwelt upon the non-success of the British policy in the cast, and urged that the government should frankly co-operate with Courts.
