THE COST OF LIVING.

The Question as In Whether II Is Greater

In Summer or In Winter, "I was talking with my wife the other day about the cost of living," sold a man, "about whether it costs more to live in summer or in winter, and she said it de-pended a good deal on how you were situ-ated—that is, whether you lived in the country, or in a smaller dity where you had country, or in a smaller div where you had a gardon and ralled your own vegetables, or whother you lived in a dity where you had to buy all those things, and it depend-ed also a good deal on how you were dr-sumstanced. She thought that people who were downright poor and people who were rich could live cheaper in summer than in wintex—this is of course not taking any account of summer travel and that sori of tiding; the poor, because in summer these thing; the poor, because in summer they had have to pay for fuel and the clothes required cost has, and they could if need be live on as little as at any time; the rich, eating more or less fresh vegetables and fruits in winter, because vegetables were cheaper in summer. steeper in summer. "As to people in moderate dreum-stance, that is with incomes sufficient to live comfortably on, she thought that if anything is cost them rather more to live in summer. Light, fuel and clothes cost them more in winter, but they spent less in winter for food. The moderate people and the attent action to not blue to in winter for food. The inductive people couldn't afford to eat frosh vegetables in winter; they are canned goods then, and in less quantity and at less expense than the fresh vegetables and fruits of which they ate freely in summer. "Upon further deliberation, however, my wife was inclined to think that, taking one thing with another, it cost people in moderate circumstances about the same te live in winter as in summer, and with this view I am inclined to agree. In fact, I know, when I come to think about it, that our own expenses in winter and summer are strikingly uniform, as indeed they are the year around, so closely do they at all times approximate to our income."-New York Sun
