MISSION OF NEWSPAPERS.

The lecture of Rabbi Joseph Krauskopf, in Philadelphia, on the uses and abuses of the press has attracted wide attention, and has caused much favorable comment for its printedity incisivenes and common sense. In opening his lecture, Rabbi Krauskopf declared that, in many respects, the newspaper was superior to the pulpit. It reaches larger good the future must determine. The morning or evening paper is the whole library of people; it is the only book they can read or care to read. But for It thousands who now read, and take pleasure in reading, would sink back into the darkness and ignorance of former times. And whether there have not been thousands who have been discouraged by it from becoming botter read and better educated men and women is a point that also must be considered. The acknowledgment that much of the claim of the newspaper to superiority over pulpit, government, judiciary, and school, means that "we have is our midst a the sultan's request to send officers power so gigantic, so all-embracing, so all- and financiers to reorganize the coupenetrating, that not all the ages in all the try, as being inopportune.
