A morgan similar to this is now in use in some European towns. Another idea of Mr. Calver is that the bottes be distocated. It is a well known fast that in the dry siz of the desert meat never spails, but keeps sweet indefinitely, even in the warmest elimate, a fact which is horne out by the statements of travelers in our own deserts of the west. Mr. Calver would so arrange that when the proof of douth has settled forever any question of If a existing the corpus be placed to a large characteristic and subject for days to a very dry and intense bent. If the process is slow, the roundt will be that the body will shriv-cl, but is will preserve its natural look as long as the air remains dry. By arranging the dead in glass coffins, through which dry, hot, clean air constantly flows, the men who die today can be kept for years.
