bold each of the accused women in $200 ball, for trial at court. The decision did not meet with the ap-probation of the Hinks family and for a while it was a question as to whether their voices, or that of Constable Bolin had the most force. The Smiths stole out of the office quietly with a big smile of satisfaction up their sleeves, and the Hinks faction followed in a molsy manner, one or two of them threaton-ing to make troable for the court and the Smiths. When slience once more reigned Smiths. When silence once more reigned Justice Cardin mopped his heated brow and remarked, "I can get all the excitement I want out of one case like that in a year."
