The British ships fired 40 and the foreign 30 shells at the village and ruined the house held by the Cretans. The flag was soon lowered and the order 'cease firing' sounded after ten minutes, Thereupon the flag was rehoisted. The cks around were crowded with Cre tans. The Turks, encouraged by the fleets, now opened a lively fusillade while the Cretans were removing the wounded. The Cretans had not replied during the whole performance. It was a somewhat melancholy and degrading spectacle.

The night that Fort Voukolles fell Colonel Vassos learned that the Turk-ish garrison from Canea was advanc-ing to succor the defeated Turks. He dispatched a body of insurgents to meet them, and speedily followed him-self with his troops. In the plain off Livadia L500 Turks and 2,500 Cretans, with three guns, engaged in battle. The Cretan insurgents and the Greek troops deployed, and after 90 minutes fighting swept the plain, forcing the Turks to take refuge in Canea. Col-onel Vassos burned the fortified barracies at Livadia and the Aghia blockshouse. In obedience to the orders of the king of Greece, Colonel Vassos recalled the troops to Platania.

The Cretans suffered heavily by their own fault. They disregarded an order to withhold muskery fire until the work of the artillery had been completed. They wasted 50,000 cartridges and tost 30 men maintaining a furious and foolish fire, advanting to within 100 yards of the reduction, while the Tarks fired splendally, wasting few builts.
