THE LEGISLATURE.

Another Animated Discussion in the Senate.—The Proceedings.

Harrisburg, March 18.—The Crothers anti-trust bill passed second reading yesterday in the house without objection after it was amended by the author.

The bill creating the office of county solicitor, to be elected by the people, in counties having 150,000 population, passed finally.

A resolution was presented by the Judiciary General committee yesterday recommending a warrant be issued for Dr. S. C. Swallow to bring him to the bar of the Senate to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt in not answering certain questions.

Senator White offered a resolution to recommend the Crothers anti-trust bill with an amendment attaching to it the chairman of the committee stated that the bill had been reported through false representations; the understanding being that the bill be reported out for printing only.

This brought Senator Coyle to his feet, who said that his amendment was not a movement to have the bill recommitted. Senator Grady replied that "if the Senator from Schuylkill violates a promise it is the duty of the Senate to compel him to keep it."

Grady reminded Coyle that no Senator was so quick to seek corporation favors than he, and he denied that he represented the minor. He sent to the clerk and had read a communication from a resident of Schuylkill, who claimed that it was not a corporation that gave the mining regions its poverty.

The resolution calling for an investigation in the bituminous region, introduced by Representative McWhiney, was brought up in the house, and that body assented to the amendment extending the investigation to the anthracite region.

A bill was introduced extending the privilege of the act of 1887 to water and electric light companies.

VICTORY FOR LANKY BOB!

Corbett Shed Tears Over the Result of the Battle.

KNOCKED OUT BY A CHANGE BLOW.

Corbett Looked Like a Winner at the Beginning of the Final Round, But a Terrific Left Hand Punch Below the Heart Sent Him Down.

Corbett recovered from a game battle for nearly eight rounds more, though there were several occasions during that time when Corbett seemed to have had him going.

Nearly all the spectators thought the end was at hand then, but the Australian recovered from a game battle for nearly eight rounds more, though there were several occasions during that time when Corbett seemed to have had him going.

At the opening of the fourteenth and last round Corbett looked the winner. Though somewhat tired, he was still strong, and was displaying more alertness, and was continuing to pound the Australian and keep up the incessant blows.

And then came the final blow, and the end. That which ended the fight was a left hand punch delivered just below the heart. It was all the more effective for the reason that Corbett was leaning backward when it came.

When the defeated champion finally arose, with the assistance of his attendants, and recovered sufficiently from his dazed condition to realize the calamity that had befallen him, he broke out with all the fury of an enraged animal, and discharging all the rules which govern the art of which he is a disciple rushed at his victorious opponent and made a vain struggle to beat him over the ropes, only desisting when his own friends and seconds forced him away.

And then the new champion was borne to his dressing room amid the cheers of the 5,000 people who were in the arena, accompanied by his seconds and trainers, and also by his wife, who had watched the contest from a position within a few feet of the ring side, and who had taken in every detail, even at the time when it seemed that her husband would be knocked insensible at her feet.

It was a great contest, but notwithstanding the cheers for the victor, the majority of those who witnessed the fight could not but feel a sense of disappointment at the result, believing, as they did, that victory was taken from Corbett at a moment when he seemed sure of gaining it himself.

The contest was accompanied by the usual delay which the fight could not but feel a sense of disappointment at the result, believing, as they did, that victory was taken from Corbett at a moment when he seemed sure of gaining it himself.

THE RELIEF MINSTRELS!

An Excellent Program Arranged by the Vaudeville Club.

RELIEF STATION OPEN TO-NIGHT.

The General Committee Will Meet in the Council Chamber to-morrow Night to Hear Reports and the Entertainment Committee Will Also Meet.

The arrangements for the grand minstrel entertainment to be given in Ferguson's theatre next Monday evening by the Vaudeville Club and Schoppa orchestra for the benefit of the poor relief fund are complete and nothing remains to make the entertainment a success but the sale of tickets.

The relief station at 33 West Centre street will be open from 5 to 10 o'clock this morning.

It appears that the relief movement started in the public school class of Miss Hattie L. Hess in the new White street school building is not an organized movement on the part of the club, but voluntary by a few of the pupils who have undertaken relief work on their own account.

The general committee on relief will meet in the Council chamber at eight o'clock to hear reports and discuss them, as well as all matters bearing upon the relief movement.

Interest Over the Fight. In no place in this county was more interest manifested over the Fitzsimmons-Corbett fight than in Shenandoah and the affair continues to be the foremost topic of discussion in most of the public places.

There were many admirers of both men in the town and every stray of news concerning the fight was grasped with great eagerness, so that when the HERALD appeared last evening with the account of the battle by rounds it was received with great satisfaction.

Last night a report spread that one of Corbett's friends had shot Referee Siler. This had it been proved would have meant a demand for the Philadelphia and New York morning papers and the bundles could hardly be opened at the depot this morning fast enough to satisfy the crowd that wanted papers, which sold like hot cakes at a skating carnival.

The report proved unfounded and the general opinion then drifted to the conclusion that it had been spread as a flyer to create a demand for the morning papers.

Several people of town dropped pretty healthy sums on Corbett, but there were more men who pinned their faith to Fitzsimmons.

The heaviest individual winner thus far reported is George Lowrey, the minstrel, who will assist the Vaudeville Club and Schoppa orchestra in the national entertainment at Ferguson's theatre next Monday evening for the benefit of the relief fund.

George took in $100 of Corbett money.

NO ARSON ATTEMPTED.

A Drunken Man Spreads a False Sensational Report.

George Hartzog, a widower who resides in equal apartments in a basement of a building on West Lloyd street, owned by the Columbia Brewing Company, was arraigned before Justice Lawlor last night, charged with attempting to set fire to the house in which he lives.

The complaint was made upon oath of one of the neighbors, but when the Justice investigated the case it was found that the neighbor had become alarmed by a story told by another neighbor, who stated that Hartzog had sprinkled kerosene oil over the floor of the basement, and intended to apply a match to it.

Further investigation showed that the neighbor who had told the story was drunk, having been out celebrating St. Patrick's Day, and that the charge had no foundation, so that Hartzog was discharged. The latter lives in poverty with his three small children.
