STRUCK BY A TRAIN.

A Young Man Mangled on the Railroad Near Grandville.

Special to Evening Herald. GRANDVILLE, March 29.—John Francy, aged 21 years and residing at Colorado, was found by workmen early this morning lying on the P. & R. railroad, a short distance north of the Grandville station, in an unconscious and terribly mangled condition. Francy had been to Shenandoah yesterday and it is supposed that he stole a ride home on freight train No. 80, south bound, and was struck by passenger train No. 9, north bound, at about 10:30 last night. There is no proof, however, of this or the manner in which the accident occurred. There is a deep indentation at the base of the victim's skull, a fracture of the ribs and internal injuries which will in all probability prove fatal. The young man was removed to the Miners' hospital while in an unconscious condition and was still in that state this afternoon.

Brown's Banquet—Cafe Free Lunch. Grand Army band a up to-night. Hot lunch to-morrow morning. Meals at all hours. Free continuous phonograph entertainment. All the latest songs and band marches.

Ex-Senator Monaghan in Town. Ex-Senator B. J. Monaghan, who is one of the leading business men of Iowa, dropped into town for a short visit rather unexpectedly on Saturday night and has been kept busy ever since shaking hands and exchanging greetings with his friends who comprise the majority of the residents of town, and many were the wishes expressed that he had returned to stay. Such, unfortunately, is not the case, for while he has a longing to be again located with his old friends, business cares are such that his stay will be limited and he will shortly take his departure again for the state of Republican majorities, which he will try to keep down as he did those of Pennsylvania.

When bilious or constive, eat a Cascaret candy cathartic, cure guaranteed, 10c, 25c.

Driving Mishap. Two men yesterday hired a horse from William Snyder and a carriage from Joe Nawitzki to attend a funeral. After attending the burial on the hill they drove to Ringtown, where they imbibed too freely of liquor. On the return trip the horse became uncontrollable at the foot of the Ringtown mountain, near Dixon, and a runaway followed in which the horse broke loose from the carriage and arrived in town last evening minus the collar and the traces. The animal is badly bruised about the legs and will not be fit to be worked for several days. The carriage was broken into splinters. None of the occupants were hurt, but they were obliged to return home by foot.

Kendrick House Free Lunch. Grand Army band soup will be served free to-night.

Children Stray Away. The three-year-old child of George Humble, of North White street, strayed from his home at about 10:30 o'clock this morning and was not found until two o'clock this afternoon when he was brought home by the child to the Herald office, saying that he found it straying near her home. The four-year-old child of Mrs. Fox strayed from its home at about 10 o'clock this morning and was found by Mrs. Joseph Schenck, of South Park street, from whom the mother received the child at about one o'clock this afternoon.

Arrested for Train Jumping. A 14-year-old boy named Coyle, residing on West Lloyd street, was arrested this morning by C. L. Pullman, Police Officer, and taken before Justice Cardin on a charge of jumping on trains. The father of the boy said he would pay no fine or costs and the weeping prisoner was taken to the lockup. Pullman said he could not release the boy, as the railroad companies are determined to prosecute him for jumping on every case to try and break up the practice of train jumping.

Saloon Opening. Matt Lambert will tomorrow night have a formal opening of his saloon at the corner of Centre and Gilbert streets, which he has stocked with the most popular brands of beer, ales and porters and the finest brands of whiskeys, wines and cigars. Mr. Lambert was for several years chief dispenser at Mulholland's cafe and is one of the most popular men in the business.

Poisoned by Drinking Alcohol. Harrisburg, March 28.—Alfred J. Newman, 35 years, is dead, and W. H. Henderson, 28 years, is hovering between life and death from drinking alcohol which they found in a barrel while working in the cellar of a Harrisburg drug firm. A coroner's jury found that Newman's death was due to excessive stimulation by alcohol. The men drank nearly a gallon between them. Both are colored.

Would-be Poisoner Sentenced. Erie, Pa., March 28.—Mrs. P. H. Noll, 40, convicted of poisoning the husband of her husband, was yesterday sentenced by Judge Walling to the Western penitentiary for one year and to pay a fine of $200. A petition for clemency was signed by the wronged husband and hundreds of neighbors. Mrs. Noll collapsed when sentence was pronounced. She will be taken to the penitentiary on Monday.

Surprise Party. Last evening a surprise party was held at the residence of H. W. Sheeler, on North Main street, in honor of the birthday of Mrs. Sheeler. She was the recipient of a handsome rocking chair. Games were indulged in until a late hour, when luncheon was served, and the guests left for their homes at a late hour, well pleased with the evening's enjoyment.

Festival and Entertainment. Several members of Hops Section No. 10, J. T. H. & T. of town, last night attended the anniversary festival and entertainment of the Wm. Penn section at the latter place and had a very enjoyable time. A program of choice literary and musical selections was rendered and the service of refreshments was equally pleasing.

Better Lights. The Shenandoah Electric Illuminating Company is putting a larger wire on its West Oak street circuit to strengthen the service in that part of the town.

THE WM. PENN MINE EXPLOSION

William Lavenburg, One of the Victims, Died Yesterday.

HAGGERTY'S CONDITION SERIOUS!

Proceedings at the Sargent Inquest Yesterday Afternoon—Three Witnesses Testify to the Condition of the Mine Before the Accident Occurred.

William Lavenburg, the second of the victims of the gas explosion in the Wm. Penn colliery last Tuesday morning, died at three o'clock yesterday afternoon at his home in Wm. Penn. He was 22 years of age and unmarried. Philip Haggerty, the third victim, is said to be in a precarious condition. The verdict of the coroner's jury by which the officials of the mine were censured for the explosion has renewed interest in the case, inasmuch that immediately after the accident it appeared to be generally believed that the explosion was due primarily to an accumulation of gas that could not be foreseen. The continuation of the inquest yesterday afternoon, however, developed facts which had not previously been brought to light and seemed to impress the jury with an entirely different view. Papers were produced before the jury to show that there were two explosions in the mine, the first being a slight one when Sargent and Lavenburg were leading a car in the Buck Mountain gangway and the second taking place in the tunnel after Sargent and his two companions withdrew from the Mammoth gangway to the tunnel and Sargent struck the match. It is claimed that Sargent and Lavenburg were not slightly burned by the first explosion, and Haggerty escaped. This is explained by the fact that Sargent and Lavenburg were on top of the car they were leading, while Haggerty stood on the level of the gangway and was below the range of gas. It is also stated that when the second explosion took place the men were blown from their position. After regaining their feet the three men retreated to the Buck Mountain end of the tunnel. There Haggerty fell and lay until some men coming down the tender stole found him and he was taken up the slope in a car. He was brought to his home some time before the others reached the surface, and it is believed that this accounts for the postponement of the fatal result in his case. Sargent and Lavenburg did not stop with Haggerty. They suffered intensely from their burns and ran along the Buck Mountain gangway for almost a mile, when Sargent was blown from his position. After being stopped there and assisted to descend a few minutes later. It was not until after Sargent died that it was discovered that his left ankle was fractured and it will probably never be known how the fracture was sustained. Some believe it was received when he fell from the car, others incline to the opinion that it was received when the man was blown by the explosion and that his burns caused him such excruciating pain that he hobbled along not knowing that the ankle was fractured.

The first witness examined at the inquest yesterday was David Davis, of 124 North West street, this town, who has known the man in the colliery for eighteen years. He testified that when he went into the Mammoth gangway on Monday night, the 22nd inst., the gangway in the vicinity of the place where the accident occurred was pretty well blocked up. The place was working below. He made no complaint to any of the bosses as to the condition of the place and had not seen any of them there, except Philip Jones, the fire boss. He went to the place to show the men where the timber should be placed. He made no remarks about the place. The gangway was pretty good when timber was put in about two days previous. Witness was never instructed to notify the boss, through the engineer, or others, when he should find the gangway on a squeeze. He didn't consider the place safe to haul coal through.

David Davis, timberman employed at the colliery the night of the explosion, testified that when he went into the Wm. Penn, gas evidence substantiated his story. He was Bevan's buddy. He also testified that he and Bevan left the gangway before 12 o'clock on Monday night because they considered it too dangerous to work in. He didn't make any report to the officials. He supposed the boss knew the place and didn't consider the place safe to pull coal through it at the time. It was Sargent's work to take cars out of the Buck Mountain gangway through the tunnel and Mammoth gangway to the foot of No. 1 slope. Witness and Bevan saw out several times while timber was being put in the gangway until they found the place got too dangerous when they gave up work after putting up two sets of timber and leaving two sets down. He heard falls in the workings below after Jones, the fire boss, left. The whole western part of the mine appears to be on a squeeze.

John Sargent, of Grandville, a brother of one of the victims, was given the benefit of asking questions and asked Davis if the place was only "bibbling" or working heavy and what were the remarks of Jones, the fire boss, in that connection. Davis answered that Jones had remarked that the place had been working heavy all day.

William James, of Wm. Penn, a driver in the mines, was next called. He was employed in the Mammoth gangway and traveled over the place that cavol in about half an hour before it went down. The place was working badly on the day previous. Early Monday morning, while he was going to the stable to get his mules, he heard the place working and a small piece of coal fell. He ran to the stable and got his mules. When he came out to the slope he told Jones the fire boss, that the place was bad. Jones said "Yes" and told witness to send a boy ahead of him on the trip, and mules were there were no falls. The boy was William Brown and the driver sent him about of the trip according to instructions. It was bad all day. He didn't hear any falls during the day, but the place seemed to be working everywhere. He didn't take any care in or out on Tuesday morning because mules were loaded for him. Men were engaged in fixing up the gangway on Monday. They were re-surfacing the timbers with planks. When the cave-in occurred witness was in the East Buck and felt a slight shock. There was only one shock. Two men came in with safety lamps and told witness and others to blow out their lights and get out. They did so, traveling by the lights of the safety lamps. Witness asked what had happened, but got no answer. He made up his mind that if he got out of the mine alive he would not enter it again, and will not.

Mr. Sargent, brother of Joseph, asked: "When you asked Mr. Jones this place was working what did he say?"

A. I said the place is working bad and he said "Yes, I know; you want to be careful," or something of that kind.

There were no more witnesses to be examined and Mr. Sargent presented two documents which were read to the jury. The papers were affidavits from Justice Green, of Wm. Penn, in which he certified that upon conversing with Philip Haggerty the latter stated that William Lavenburg and Joseph Sargent were about building the leading of a car with coal and Haggerty was standing on the gangway when an explosion occurred and Lavenburg and Sargent were slightly burned. The trial then started through the tunnel to go to the bottom of the slope. When in the tunnel Sargent lighted a match and ignited the gas, causing it to explode a second time. On that morning he heard the gangway working where it afterwards fell. The second paper contained similar statements made by William Lavenburg. John Sargent swore that he was present when Haggerty and Lavenburg made the statements to Justice Green.

The jury, which consisted of John Seaman, J. J. Powell, Patrick Flaherty, John Keefe, Patrick Connors and J. H. Manley, rendered the following verdict: "The said Joseph Sargent's death was caused by an explosion of gas in a gangway at the Wm. Penn colliery; said explosion was caused by the falling or coming in of the said gangway into an old abandoned breast that had been driven up from the lower gangway, allowing gas that had accumulated in said breast to escape. Said accident was due to the carelessness and neglect of the officials in charge of the inside workings of said colliery."

Attempted Jail Escape.

An attempt was made on Sunday by two prisoners to escape from the county jail, but they were frustrated. The prisoners who caught their liberty are John Lynch and Charles Sadosky. The latter is 19 years old, and is serving one year for a burglary committed in Shenandoah. Lynch is also convicted of burglary, and was sentenced to pay a fine of $75 and costs and serve four years and eight months in jail. He is 29 years of age. In some manner the men secured a pocket knife, and with that sawed out one of the slats in the iron bedstead. With this they began work on the wall, and were prepared to make their escape when the attention of Warden Brewer was called to the attempt made by another inmate. After making the discovery Warden Brewer removed Deputy Warden W. J. Carter and Night Watchman Leonard for inattention to duty. George Seiders was placed in Carter's position and Edward Williams in Leonard's position.

Jewelry Store Removed.

A Holderman's jewelry store has been removed to the newly remodeled store room at 21 N. Main street, between the Keeler and Gaughan dry goods stores, where courteous and liberal treatment will be extended to all as well as new customers. 3-23-97

Removing to Birdboro.

George Manning, the East Coal street shoe dealer, is moving his family to Birdboro, in Berks county, where he will take up his future residence. Mr. Manning has been one of Shenandoah's leading and influential residents for the past thirty years, and his departure is a source of much regret. During all that time he has been a subscriber to the Herald, and will continue to peruse the columns of the people's favorite paper in his new home.

A New Proprietor.

James C. Phillips, of Mt. Carmel, has taken charge of Michael Peters' old stand, on North Main street. To the people of town he is no stranger, having resided here several years, and is known among his acquaintances as a general, all-around good hauler. His business is conducted on a square basis, and his place is one of amusement, where good music, singing and dancing may be enjoyed. A call to the new locality will convince you of these facts. 3-30-97

THE TARIFF DISCUSSION I

Enlivened by a Day of Sensational Episodes.

REPUBLICANS OPPOSE THE BILL.

Two Massachusetts Members Declare That the Proposed Duties Are Higher Than Necessary—Mr. Morgan Attacks the Central Pacific Road in the Senate.

Washington, March 30.—Yesterday was by far the most exciting day the house has witnessed since the tariff debate began. The proceedings throughout were of a lively order, and several times bordered on the sensational. The Democrats blocked proceedings in the first instance until a quorum appeared, and then by a strategic movement forced a meeting of the ways and means committee while the house was considering the bill. The majority members of the committee had agreed on some amendments which they desired to offer without the formality of a meeting of the full committee.

Mr. Bailey, the opposition leader, said the minority would agree to this if assurance were given them that they could offer two amendments. When the majority ascertained, however, that one of these amendments was aimed at the steel rail pool and the other to strike out the differential on refined sugar they declined the proposal. Mr. Johnson, of Indiana, grew so obstreperous at one stage of the proceedings in his efforts to check irrelevant debate that the speaker had to be summoned to the chair to restore order.

But by far the most interesting and important feature of the day occurred toward the close of the session, when Mr. McCall and Mr. Lovering, two Massachusetts Republicans, successively assailed the bill, the former charging that the duties were higher than were necessary, and the latter that the manufacturers wanted a bill that would live. "We don't want to be strangled by free trade," said he, "rather do we want to be smothered by protection." This was the first break over the party traces, and the action led to some very plain words from the Republican leaders. It was a family row, which the opposition enjoyed hugely. Mr. Russell, one of the members of the ways and means committee from Connecticut, poured hot shot into the camp of the Massachusetts dissenters, exposing the fact in the course of his remarks that Mr. Lovering, who is a cotton manufacturer, had asked for increases on the finest grades of cotton yarns.

Mr. Walker, of Massachusetts, also attacked the position of his colleagues, and the "extraordinary discussion," as Mr. Dingley termed it, drew from the majority leader a vigorous statement concerning the cotton and woolen schedules. Not a line of the bill was read yesterday; the committee on ways and means retaining the floor throughout the day with committee amendments. About 20 of these were offered and adopted. Most of them were not of great importance. The most important placed copper on the free list.

Before turning to the arbitration treaty the senate yesterday gave an hour to routine business in open session. Resolutions were agreed to, by Mr. Pettigrew, of South Dakota, asking the secretary of the interior for information relative to President Cleveland's sweeping order establishing forest reserves, and by Mr. Gallinger, of New Hampshire, calling on the civil service commission for the reason why certain classes of workmen were not subject to competitive examination, contrary to the law of exempting laborers from the classified service.

The first phase of the tariff in the senate made its appearance in a senate resolution by Mr. Allen, of Nebraska, declaring that tariff taxes on articles of daily consumption should not be laid so as to enrich one class at the expense of the masses. It went over. Mr. Hoar, from the judiciary committee, reported favorably the bill to prevent the introduction of prize rights in the District of Columbia and the territories, and to prohibit the shipping of material for the exhibition, a minority report on the bill for a commission to settle the Central Pacific railroad indebtedness to the government. The report asserts that the real occasion for this bill is to avoid the disclosure of frauds and breaches of trust on the part of owners and directors of the Central Pacific railroad, which, if they were dealt with in the spirit of justice, would fasten liabilities upon these men that would far exceed the vast sums which the company owes to the government.

Mr. Morgan refers to the "enormous frauds perpetrated by both of these railroad companies upon the United States, the remedy for which is easily in reach through tribunals of justice." The report then urges that the president should not be left as final umpire, as proposed by this bill, "in a contest between private and public justice." The responsibility rests on congress, and it should not burden it on the president. Mr. Morgan adds that, although the result would disappoint the powerful order of railroad wreckers, yet a sane adjustment is open by the passage of senate bill 223. The report closes with a statement as to the general character of the bill, and that it should not burden it on the president. Mr. Morgan adds that, although the result would disappoint the powerful order of railroad wreckers, yet a sane adjustment is open by the passage of senate bill 223.
