HOW INDIANS ARE NAMED.

Titles Merely Tuchlental and Offen Tem-

As the Indian child grows he commits acts from time to time coch of which gives him a new name. For example, he may see a hear and run screening to the tapes. The fedicall inogh at him, and call him Runs from a lear. Later on he may become the possesse of an anedy ponywhich he lears to tile and become known as Abraid of its lorse. Or, he may mount a horse from which abother Indian has been thrown, and he then he spoken of as Rides the house. Further on he becomes a great hunter and kills live bears, and they call him Five hears, and what he slays another the mane shanges to Six-kears. He may perform a validate deed in battle and ride his lorse through the camp of his oning, for which he is dubbed. Charges through the camp. During the canflict he may kill one of the home, if his victim is the only one shain, he is called Kills-the enemy. But if others full the one has kills in the has placed in the tot one with the big-knee. If he treaths in his hair a yellow feather which he has placed from the tail of an easile he may be called from the tail of an easile he may be called from the tail of an easile he may be called from the tail of an easile he may be called from the tail of an easile he may be called from the tail of an easile he may be called from the tail of an easile he may be called from the tail of an easile he may be called from the tail of an easile he may be called from the fact of an easile he may be called from the fact of an easile he may be called from the fact of an easile he may be called from the fact of an easile he may be called from the fact of an easile he may be called from the fact of an easile he may be called from the fact of an easile he may be called from the fact of an easile he may be called from the fact of an easile he may be called from the fact of the called from the fact of the by yellow feather which he has plucked from the tail of an eagle, he may be called Englo-tail, Eagle-feather, Yellow-tail or Yellow-teather. If he gives it to his friend, Ragle-ball, Eagle-feather, Yellow-tail of the returned from the city with the Yellow-feather. If he gives it to his friend, but selection of Ladies' Millinery he will be manned Gives-feather, but if he Goods. by will be named circustrature, out it he refuses to part with it his name will change to Keeps-his-feather. Or he may obtain his name from some other object. If he is accustomed to ride what is comandy known as a "calico" horse, he may a called Spotted-horse, but if his horse him Rides-the-horse, Six-bears of s-the-enemy. For this reason it occurthat if you speak of the Indian in the presence of certain members of the tribe and mall him Six-bears they will laugh at you and say, "That not his name; his name Huns-from-a-teer." But if you speak of him to certain others as Runs from a bear Hones it will be seen that the Indian names are nothing, a delution and a snare, and the practice of converting them into English appears emissibly unwise. It is certain that the name on the roll at the agency is the interpretation of only one of the Indian's several "names." A short Indian name in their own vermenlar, or a syllable or two of a long one, if euphonlous and prenounceable, as they usually are, will arrowser outto well for a family name, but the translations are never satisfactory, and cannot be too strongly condemned.— Frank Terry in Review of Reviews.
