ARCHBISHOP RYAN'S JUBILEE.

Eminent Clergymen Honor the Philadelphia Prelate's Celebration.

Philadelphia, April 22.—Yesterday, the second day of the jubilee celebration in honor of the completion by Archbishop Ryan of 25 years' work in the ministry, was marked by an interest that seemed to be even more intensified than that which was manifested Tuesday. The ceremonies commenced at 10 o'clock in the morning by the celebration of pontifical mass in the cathedral, which was attended by a vast congregation. The celebrants were Archbishop Ryan, Cardinal Gibbons and Papal Alegate Martinelli. Archbishop Hennessy, of Dublin, Ia., preached the sermon, and the address on behalf of the clergy was made by the Rev. James F. Loughlin. There were many distinguished clergymen present from all sections of the country.

Following the services in the cathedral was the testimonial dinner to the archbishop in the Academy of Music. This was attended by nearly all of the prominent clergymen, and by very many of the more influential laymen.

In the evening there was a great parade, in which all the parishes participated. There were at least 20,000 men in line. Colonel Edward Morrell was chief marshal, assisted by 60 aids.

Proposed New School Tax.

Harrisburg, April 22.—The house yesterday passed a large number of bills on second and third reading. A bill authorizing school directors and controllers of school districts to levy and collect a per capita tax annually for school purposes excited much discussion. The purpose of the measure is to levy a tax of from $1 to $3 on all persons over 21 years of age. The measure was crudely drawn, and several members opposed it on the ground that unless it was amended to make it more explicit it might increase school taxes. Mr. Keefe, of Westmoreland, who had the measure in charge, moved to postpone for the present, so that it would be amended to meet this objection. The motion was adopted.

BURIED UNDER TONS OF COAL!

Remarkable Escape From Death in the Turkey Run Colliery.

PATRICK MONAGHAN WAS LUCKY!

There Were Tons of Coal Above and Around Him, But the Arching of Large Pieces Saved Him From Being Crushed to Death.

A breast in the Turkey Run colliery was yesterday afternoon the scene of a most remarkable escape from death and the man who did it is the experienced Patrick Monaghan, of West Oak street, and the father of one of the public school teachers, says he is at a loss at times to understand how he escaped alive, and practically unharmed, from the tons of coal which fell over the place in which he was doubled up, almost like a ball.

Monaghan and John W. Blaker, of South Janita street, were engaged in robbing in the breast and the former was about to dislodge some old pieces of wood when, like a flash, there was a great rush and fall of coal. Monaghan was the nearest to the fall and was completely covered up. Blaker escaped the fall, but a small piece of coal struck him on the back of the head with such force as to send him shooting like a dart down the chute. The man threw out his arms in the descent and caught hold of a timber, which enabled him to stop his flight and pull himself out of the way of another rush of coal which would in all probability have crushed him to pulp. Blaker's cap and lamp were lost and he was left in darkness, but hearing the groans of Monaghan above him, he made his way to the place where the unfortunate man was covered as fast as the darkness would permit. Meanwhile "Jack" Fallon, a miner working in an adjoining breast, was attracted to the place by the great noise caused by the rush and Blaker's cries for help. At Schwindt, the five hoists, and Harry Tempel also hastened to the rescue and Monaghan was soon taken from his terrible position, but not a second too soon, as he had barely been pulled from beneath the coal when a second and still greater fall than the first took place and Monaghan above him. He was found he was so doubled that his head was forced down between his legs and it was with great difficulty that he could breathe. He was threatened with asphyxiation. His remarkable escape from being crushed to death is accounted for by the manner in which the coal fell. Tons of coal were arched and above the man, but some large pieces fell in such a position as to form an arch over his body and prevented the great mass from crushing him.

Mr. Monaghan was seen at his home last night, resting comfortably on a lounge and telling some friends of his experience. With the exception of an ugly bruise above the right eye there was nothing in his appearance to show that a few hours before he had been buried beneath tons of coal. He sustained other injuries, however, that will confine him to the house for several days. His left hip was badly gashed and his back severely cut and bruised, but the worst effects will be serious for a few days. Mr. Monaghan says it was the closest call he ever had.

Resolutions Adopted.

At a meeting of Maj. Jennings Council No. 367, Jr. O. U. A. M., on Monday evening, the following resolution was adopted:

WHEREAS, There are now before our Legislature at Harrisburg several bills which are intended to protect free labor and the industries in which it is employed, from the injurious effect of convict labor competition, and prohibiting the use of all power-driven machinery in the prisons, work-houses, and reformatories of this commonwealth; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we earnestly request every member of our State Senate and House of Representatives to support such measures as will prevent the use of all power-driven machinery in the prisons, work-houses, and reformatories of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, thereby abating the outrage of "the state making her penal institutions huge factories where houses, food, clothing, and unpaid convict labor enter into competition with honest, law-abiding, self-sustaining labor."

Contest to End June 1st.

In the Lyon-Dunn Orphans' Judge contest court yesterday Judge Ikeler announced that as soon as all of the members of the bench could get together an order would be made limiting the contest to June 1st. The contest will not close until sometime in 1898. Yesterday's sessions were occupied in hearing witnesses who had written voting and ballot check lists and this brought out nothing startling except that in some cases the work was done in a very careless manner.

FRUIT DAMAGED BY FROST.

Discouraging Reports From Virginia, North Carolina and Maryland.

Norfolk, Va., April 22.—It is estimated that the heavy frost yesterday morning destroyed fruit and vegetables to lower thousands, Virginia and eastern North Carolina to the value of probably a million dollars. Every class of truck was greatly damaged. Potatoes were set back 20 days, and beans, peas and strawberries cut down to the earth.

On the eastern shore, in Accomac and Northampton Counties, the frost was blighting to Irish and sweet potatoes and small fruits.

In several instances the farmers will replant. Fruit suffered greatly, but there is so much frost in the ground that truckers say the damage will be very much greater unless a warm rain falls soon.

Telegraphic advices received from Greensboro, N. C., in the west, and Newberry trucking country in the east, say that yesterday's frost was blighting and that fruit in both sections was much injured, but damage to garden truck was light.

Dispatches from all parts of Maryland indicate that the recent cold snap has played bad havoc with blossoming fruit trees and vines. In the Maryland and Delaware peninsula a careful investigation shows that nine buds in ten have perished, trees nearest tidewater suffering the least. Advice from the western counties of Maryland indicates fruit crop injuries in but a slightly lesser degree.

Hunter Withdraws From the Contest.

Frankfort, Ky., April 22.—Dr. Godfrey Hunter last night sent a letter to the Republican legislative caucus withdrawing his name as a candidate for United States senator. An effort was made by friends of Deboe, the Hunter candidate, to proceed at once with the nomination of a new candidate, but this was defeated by a vote of 22 to 37; the followers of Holt forcing an adjournment until tonight.

Prof. Wood's Generosity.

Prof. S. L. Wood, who has successfully conducted a business college here in connection with other schools in different parts of the state, was in Shenandoah this week looking after his interests here. He has just returned from New York, where he organized one of the largest colleges in that state. The Shenandoah branch has been very successful, and during the dull times the Professor has been exceedingly lenient with the patrons of the school so far as payment of tuition is concerned, and which is appreciated. Wood's colleges are not in the same room order; they are permanent institutions, and in a short time the Shenandoah branch will be much improved and its roll of scholars greatly increased.

SPEAKER REED ON LABOR!

He Meets a Large Delegation of Labor Leaders.

NEED OF LABOR ORGANIZATIONS!

Declares Them a Necessary Concomitant of the Factory System, and Expresses Appreciation of the Moderate and Reasonable Demands of Workers.

Washington, April 22.—Speaker Reed gave an interesting talk upon the policy of the house, and incidentally declared his views upon labor organizations yesterday, in the course of one of the conferences which are of daily occurrence in the speaker's room. A delegation from the American Federation of Labor, headed by Samuel Gompers, chief officer of the order, called to request action by the speaker and the house on matters in which the federation is interested. They presented a memorial asking the appointment of Representative Gardner, of New Jersey, to the committee on labor, and also suggested amendments to the eight hour law.

The speech making on the part of the federation was done by Mr. Gompers and E. J. McGuire. Mr. Gompers said that there was great distress throughout the country, and many unemployed, and expressed a hope that congress would do all in its power to alleviate the distress. He remarked that there had not been as much legislation in the interest of labor by the last congress as the laboring man wished. They did not want to be put in the light of making demands upon congress; they merely desired to express their wishes. They regretted that the eight hour law was not more strictly enforced in its application to government work. They desired it to be understood, however, that they were antagonistic to revolutionary leaders, and believed in lawful and orderly agitation and in the improvement of existing conditions by legislation.

Speaker Reed, in reply, expressed appreciation of the moderate and reasonable attitude of the laboring men. The labor organization, he said, was a necessary concomitant of the factory system. While in the old days laborers had been individually independent, the growth of the factory system had forced them to organize for the preservation of their rights and interests. He believed that results beneficial to humanity were coming from those organizations. While reforms of the class they spoke of moved slowly, they did move. Public sentiment was moving much more tolerant of the eight hour law than it had been ten years ago. He could remember when every laboring man was expected to work 12 hours. Public sentiment had much to do with the enforcement of the eight hour law, and he had no doubt that its impulsive conditions were continually improving.

Referring to congressional action, the speaker said that only one thing could be done at a time, and he was certain all would agree that the first thing to be done by congress now was to arrive at a decision on the pending tariff bill one way or the other. He hoped the delegation would use its influence to speed public sentiment to ask for an speedy action on the tariff bill as could be obtained. It was not thought that there were conflicting ideas on other matters until that question was out of the way, because any action taken here might complicate and delay action on the tariff, which all must concede to be necessary.

The tariff question once disposed of, there would be opportunity for consideration of the other interests asking legislation. As to the special request for the appointment of Mr. Gardner, the speaker said that would be taken under consideration, as all requests for committee assignments were.

In response to the complaint that the last congress had not done enough for labor, Mr. Reed said that remonstrances had been received by him complaining that congress had been too much under the domination of the Federation of Labor. This fact would illustrate that there were conflicting ideas in the country. In conclusion Mr. Reed expressed approval of the policy adopted by the federation. A continual and constant pressure within the law was much more effective in securing reforms than violent methods, he said. Violence always brings a reaction, and the reforms sought were likely to be lost in the turmoil of the outbreak.
