CAPE TOWN.

One of the Beautiful Spots of the Cape of Everything that we ase at the Cape of Good Hope speaks of an earlier of dilization built up by people who loved rest in security amid pleasant surroundings. The Dutch settled this part of the world about the same time that they founded colonies along the Hudson river, say the middle of the seventeenth century. When they built a house, they meant that it should last not merely their lifetime, but that of generations unborn. They planted trees in long straight avenues which are still the pride of the colony, and they built their bridges and highways with the obvious intention and highway with the corrols intention of making this neighborhood another Hol-land. Mr. Cecil Hhodes has shown his ap-preciation for Dutch taste by purchasing for his home one of the finest ancestral esfor his home one of the linest ancestral estates in the colony, where he lives, when he sojourns at the Care, very much as might have done a governor of the old Dutch East India company. Before the Jameson raid Mr. Rhodos enjoyed great popularity among the Dutch Afrikanders, for he was always careful to treat their national characteristics with respect, and he was credited with an house intention of making in South Africa a great Angle-Dutch United States, where each nation might forget the jealousies born of alle glabor to different flags and all units un der the banner of Africa for the Afrikandez

The neighborhood of Cape Town is like one beautiful park, studied with the coun-try mats of those whose interests lie in the capital, and I only wonder that it is not overcrowded with people from Europe and America seeking for rest. Of course I could not love Cape Town without having ascended the Table moun-tain, which is about 3,000 feet high. My pilot on this occasion was a prominent member of the Cape logislature, who was accompanied by his wife and daughter. The two ladies made the three hours' climb seem very short to me, and when I ex-pressed my surprise at the excellence of their walking powers they assured me that all young lattes in South Africa were fond of outdoor exercise. At the time I could think of but few American women joyed transping up Table mountain un
