THE PARIS HOLOCAUST

Two Hundred Lives Lost by Fire in the French Capital.

CHARITY BAZAAR WRECKED.

Appalling Scenes in the Mad Flight From the Flames.

SPEEDY WORK OF DESTRUCTION

In a Few Minutes After the Fire Broke Out the Roof of the Blazing Structure Fell, Burying Many in the Ruins.

The Bazaar Managed by Leaders of French Society—Statements of Survivors of the Horror—The Strong Trampled Upon the Weak and the Young Crushed the Old to the Floor in the Effort to Escape—No Painter Ever Imagined a Last Judgment So Appalling.

Paris, May 5.—Fire broke out late yesterday afternoon in a crowded charitable bazaar in the Rue Jean Goujon, at which the Duchesse d'Uzes and other well known patronesses were present. The proceeds of the sales at each stall were devoted to a separate charity.

The stalls were presided over by Mme. Fevrier, the wife of General Fevrier; the Marquise de l'Algle, Mme. Jacob, the Marquise de la Doucette, the Marquise de St. Michael, the Duchesse d'Uzes, Mme. Mignotte, the Baronne de St. Idier, the Comtesse Drzyalynska, the Marquise le Gouestier, the Marquise d'Argence, the Marquise de Pitti, the Duchesse d'Alencon, a member of the Orleans family; Mme. d'Arrou, Mme. Hubsch, the Baron F. de Schelker, Mme. Moreau, the Marquise Costa de Beauregard, her royal highness the Duchesse de Vendome, the Marquise de Malson and the Comtesse de Grefful, nee la Rochevaucourt.

The building was constructed about six months ago. At the time it was remarked that it would burn like a candle in a wind. The interior was divided into shops a la Paris, constructed of prettily painted canvas.

The building was erected in the neighborhood of the ruins of the Bastille, the folding inside being concealed by tapestry hangings of the most inflammable material. Moreover, there was only one exit. The bazaar was in full swing, when suddenly, about 4 o'clock, the cry of fire rose in the quarter where the cinematograph was being exhibited.

The Duchesse d'Uzes and her daughter, the Duchesse De Luynes, had stalls near the great door. They escaped easily, the former unharmed and the latter but slightly injured. Henry Blaut, the promoter of the bazaar, had his beard burned off. General Fevrier escaped with only burns on the head and hands, along with Mme. Wilson, daughter of former President Fevrier. Mrs. La Boulaye and the Duchesse d'Alencon.

A policeman who was on duty at the doors of the bazaar says that from 1,500 to 1,800 people were in the building when the fire broke out. He adds that the alarm caused a general panic, followed by a terrible rush for the doors, which were soon choked with people, thus preventing the escape of many who might otherwise have been saved. The strong trampled upon the weak, the young crushed the old to the floor, heartrending cries of fear arose on all sides, soon followed by shrieks of agony as the flames swept onward behind the crowd struggling for the doors.

Panic helped to spread the fire. Ladies wearing cloths were flailing and wildly about, igniting the inflammable surroundings. They had the strength that cycling and athletics give, but lost their heads.

The prefect of police declares that there are fully 300 persons missing, and it is believed that all of these have perished in the holocaust.

The firemen arrived at 6 o'clock, and a company of infantry followed, to clear the ruins and search for corpses. The news spread like wildfire. All the cabinet ministers now in Paris went immediately to the scene. Hundreds of equipages streamed along the Champs d'Élysees, their occupants with anxious and tear-stained faces, inquiring for their relatives. There were many heartrending scenes of grief and despair. One lady rushed about frantically calling her daughter by name. Some one told her the girl was safe, whereupon she jumped, danced and screamed, and then rushed to the coachman to tell him to drive home, and fell in a dead swoon. Another lady went insane. A third imagined in her frenzy that she recognized her daughter's dress, and hysterically called upon her husband to tell the police to prevent the child from going to the bazaar.

Cabinet ministers, ambassadors, noblemen and members of the highest social and military circles were seen by side with the lowliest and the poorest, anxiously inquiring for their missing relatives.

About 20 were saved by Miss Ambrose and Pere Gally, who helped them save their way with a ladder to the printing room of the newspaper Le Croix. The staff of the Hotel Du Palais took valuable assistance, and saved 120 persons through a barred window overlooking the bazaar, where, while the hotel employees were carrying away the bars, they saw three persons burned to death beneath their eyes.

Policemen, their hands covered with gloves, have been deputed by the prefect of police to pick out the portions of the remains and to wrap them in trunks of cloth, to be transferred in ambulances to the Palais d'Industrie. The remains present a horrible spectacle of limbs burned and twisted. On all sides can be seen stretchers piled with mutilated corpses, skulls split open and brains extruding. Just beneath a heap of corpses, lying on the body of a woman, the face is downward, the head burned, the brain exposed, and from the empty socket of the eye the brains are slowly oozing. The arms and legs were burned off.

A little further off is the body of another woman, nude, the entrails protruding and the head missing. It is a ghastly sight.

The dead were piled in heaps, especially near the exit, where the charred remains were four feet deep. Arms, legs and skulls mingled in inextricable confusion. In some cases only the trunk of a man, with no vestige of clothing on any of the bodies.

The flames licked most of those who escaped, and dresses were burned from the backs of their wearers, who tore off their blazing hats as they rushed for the street, their heads stung to the point of frenzy, and the hose was compelled to play over the heads of the multitude. The scorched people cried for the firemen to cease them, which they did. The cries from within were cries never to be forgotten for intensity of anguish.

Patrick Stanton, a Shenandoah young man of enviable reputation, and who is in jail on suspicion of being one of the assassins of John Hall, at Shenandoah, is congratulating himself on passing fire on another charge before the Grand Jury yesterday. Before the Hall assault the case of Lewis Mann, in Shenandoah, was solved by unknown parties. A few days later Stanton offered to sell Constable Gibson a pair of sleeve buttons, which Gibson suspected was part of the property stolen from Mann's store. Stanton was arrested and charged with being implicated in the robbery. He furnished bail. Yesterday the case came before the Grand Jury and the bill was ignored.

Six true bills were found on the presentation of the Grand Jury yesterday against Neri Dietrich, Director of the Poor, and one bill is ignored. Of the true bills three were for conspiracy and the others for accepting bribes, appropriating county property and defrauding the county out of unwarmed wages. On request of Deputy District Attorney McLaughlin bail in the sum of $500 was fixed by Judge Bechtel in the minor cases and $1,000 each in the others.

WORK OF THE GRAND JURY.

Indictments Found in Several of the Shenandoah Cases.

NO CASE FOUND AGAINST SNYDER

Karpowicz Must Stand Trial For the Murder of Thomas Tomalions—Indictments Also Found Against McAlle in the Paritt Case.

POTTSVILLE, May 5.—The Grand Jury yesterday found a true bill against Matthew Karpowicz for the murder of Thomas Tomalions, at Shenandoah. The jury failed to indict William Snyder, the saloonkeeper and undertaker, who was arrested with Karpowicz on a warrant sworn out by Ewe Tomalions, the widow of the deceased. Notwithstanding she took this step the widow refused to appear as a witness when the inquest was held, but the District Attorney got her before the Grand Jury yesterday. When the warrant was sworn out Mrs. Tomalions said that her husband was beaten by Snyder and Karpowicz in the former's saloon, but according to the evidence given yesterday Snyder was in the saloon, but did not have a hand in the assault. The indicted man is one of Snyder's boarders.

A true bill was also found in the case of William J. Paritt, Jr., of East Cross No. 2, who died from hemorrhage at the nose, caused by a fist blow during a quarrel with Charles McAlle, of Shenandoah. The two young men had a difficulty in a class room of Wood's Business College and it was continued after the dismissal of the class and when they reached the sidewalk on their way home. The bill presented included voluntary and involuntary manslaughter, but indictment was made only on the latter charge.

The Sam Block robbery, another Shenandoah case, was also acted upon by the Grand Jury yesterday, and Robert Gibson, Patrick Harris, William Zollner and William Anspach were indicted on charges of burglary, entering and receiving stolen goods. This burglary was committed last winter. Harris and Zollner are out on bail, but the other two have been in jail since their arrest.
