NO RETRACTION.

Tom Joyce Retrates Charges Against Senator Coyle.

Thomas J. Joyce, editor of the Black Diamond, against whom Senator John J. Coyle, reputed owner of the Daily American, has instituted a libel suit, reiterates his charges and intimates that the trial will result in punishing him for his "Senatorial dignity," and make interesting reading for the people of the Thirtieth district. The trial has been fixed for Wednesday next. Here is what Joyce's says in the issue of his paper of yesterday:

"As nothing Black Diamond's editor may do could appear editorially, we take the liberty of sending his portrait out to-day among his multitude of readers so that all may look at the man whom Jingo Coyle has sworn has 'maliciously and vindictively' libelled him. If it were within the widest range of possibilities, of any character, to libel Mr. Coyle, we would consider the latest photo of ours—high hat and all other swell paraphernalia—into a bonfire and hire a brass band to lead us to prison.

"The pen picture we draw of Jingo's political rascality and crookedness in last Saturday's issue of this paper, was drawn methodically and advisedly. We repeat—every word of it. We repeat—every word of it in the presence of a Grand Jury's 'True Bill' against us—that before he would promise to appoint one of his readers, to a lucrative position, at Harrisburg, he compelled that reader to promise, with hand uplifted, that he would divide the salary drawn from the position with Mr. Coyle. We also add Mr. Coyle's greedy, despicable nature would not even then permit him to believe his victim; he made him attach his name to a paper which called for an equal division of the reader's salary and 'pickings' at Harrisburg.

"This is Black Diamond's apology to the fellow who would have the public believe that this paper had 'libelled' him."

AN IRATE FATHER.

He Flourishes a Revolver Under a Young Man's Nose.

A maiden fair residing on North Catherine street, called on her young man at her home Saturday evening, but was not kept a lookout for her father, as he was opposed to her having male company. In due time the father arrived and the two young men made hasty departure. One got away safely, but the other parent was too quick for the young man, and he was arrested. Whipping out a revolver, the father held it under the young man's nose, accompanying the act with threats to raise the roof of the captive's head. The latter shook with fright. As he glanced down the barrel of the revolver he imagined he could see the nose of the young man, and he fled. Three times the father of the girl swung his mighty right arm around, giving the weapon a pinwheel motion, and again brought the cold muzzle close to the unfortunate young man's nostrils, but fortunately the trigger was not pulled. The encounter ended with the young man's escape, by the father to the young man to forego give the former's house as wide berth as he would a cave filled with rattlesnakes.

Contestant Lyon claims to have discovered 70 illegal votes cast for Dunn, so that if the present rate of discovery is kept up by the latter at least two months will be required to secure the 420 and more necessary to offset the contestant's claim to the office.

SCHUYLKILL APPROPRIATIONS

Will Awake a Lively Discussion in the Pennsylvania Legislature.

THE QUESTION OF ADJOURNMENT.

It is Not Probable That the Legislators Can Leave Harrisburg Before Saturday Next, and the Session May Continue Into Next Week.

Harrisburg, June 23.—The legislature will hardly get away before next Saturday night, though the final adjournment has been fixed for Thursday. The members agree that unless all debate is shut off the business cannot be cleaned up in four days. The house has passed the bulk of the appropriation bills, and the senate committee is reporting them out as fast as they are received. Chairman Marshall says the house will bring out the remaining senate appropriation bills this afternoon, and then take a rest the remainder of the session. The committees have been working day and night for a month parking down objections in the house. The general revenue bill in shape for final passage. Mr. Marshall does not think it will be necessary to extend the session beyond Saturday to dispose of all the legislation scheduled. Speaker Boyer believes both bodies will be ready to adjourn Thursday, and yet many members would not be surprised if the session was delayed ten days. The defeat by the house of the new revenue bill increasing liquor licenses has upset the calculations of the leaders. This measure would raise about $2,000,000 a year, and unless it becomes a law it will be necessary for Governor Hastings to slaughter the appropriation bills to keep the public expenses for the next two years within the revenues. The bill will go to a conference committee, and may be fixed up there to meet the objections in the house. The representatives are bent on taking the revenue and do not take kindly to putting an additional tax of $100 on retailers, except in classified cities, where the tax is raised $200.

The movement to cut the school appropriation of $900,000 a year has been abandoned. The country members would not agree to the proposition under any circumstances. The general appropriation bill as it passed second reading appropriated $5,500,000 a year to the schools. The bill is in the hands of the house committee, and its members will not take the responsibility of making the cut. If it is made it will have to be done by the senate.

There will be a lively time in the house when the expense bills of the elections and investigating committees are taken up for final passage. A strong combination has been formed to defeat these measures, especially the Philadelphia "Lexow" committee bill of $66,000 and the bill of $56,000 for fitting up Grace church. The pressure on members from the country to reduce expenses has become so great that six members of the special house committee have refused to take a cent for car fare and other personal expenses. Such a thing has never been known before in the history of the state. These members are Chairman Hoessak, of the oleomargarine committee, and his colleague, Mr. Ford of Allegheny, Rice of Bucks, Wilson of Lycoming, Pender of Allegheny and Alexander of Clearfield. With the exception of Mr. Ford of Allegheny, who follows the lead of Senator Quay, these members belong to the "Seventy-six," the leaders of which organized a movement to kill all expense bills. One effect of this scheme has been the quiet paring down by the appropriations committee of several of the objectionable bills. At least $25,000 or $30,000 will be saved this way.

Repeated attempts have been made in the house by Mr. Bure of Huntingdon, Keator of Philadelphia and others to amend these bills to require members of the committees to file sworn statements with the auditor general that their accounts are correct, but they all have been futile. If these expense bills are passed and signed by the governor there will be over $150,000 less for charity.

Many members have voted for the measure in the belief that they will be disapproved by the governor. They preferred to throw the responsibility on the governor rather than incur the displeasure of their colleagues, who are directly interested by voting against them.

The poll tax and assessment bills drafted by a special committee of the state Republican committee to carry out the pledges of the campaign of 1895 and 1896 are still in the hands of the governor. The non-political interference bill was killed by the house, but will probably be reconsidered, amended and passed. The civil service bill has passed the senate and will be taken up by the house today for final passage. It will have to go back to the senate for concurrence in the amendments made by the judicial general committee. Although a radical change has been made in all four bills, nobody doubts but that they will be signed.

The "ripper" bill and all other schemes to give Pittsburg a new charter have all been abandoned. The reformers of the "Smoky City" will have to wait at least two years longer for the reforms they have asked of the legislature. The Becker "three-fifths" confirmation bill has gone to the governor, and will be disposed of in the ten days' limit expiring Saturday.

John C. Bullitt and other prominent Philadelphia reformers will be given a hearing on Wednesday at the executive chamber. Should the governor veto the bill before the legislature gets away an attempt will be made to pass it over his veto.

The outcome of the oleo investigation will probably be the dismissal of Frank N. Moore, of Bradford, special agent of the department of agriculture. Moore was accused by Mr. Hoessak, chairman of the investigating committee, of going to league with the oleo dealers in western Pennsylvania, but this charge could not be proved. Several material witnesses failed to appear before the committee. Mr. Moore believes he has been vindicated by the investigation, and apparently is not concerned about the story that he is to be removed.

Mr. Cressy, of Columbia, the Democratic leader of the house, and Mr. Deary, of Dauphin, are the only members of either body who have not missed a session since organization.

THE WYATT BILLS.

Adjournment on Thursday may mean intentional failure to reach certain appropriation bills, the aggregate amount of which might offset the half-million that was aimed at by the now abandoned project to cut the school fund. It certainly means the death of some investigating committee bills which the dominant Republican element confesses its fear to father, among them the four bills put in by Sergeant-Arns Wyatt for the Saunders-Roberts and Shiffer-Leh election costs, the Washington Monument celebration and the $50,000 insurance scandal probe.

All four Wyatt bills were found fraudulently on the calendar Saturday. The election contest expense bills had been repudiated by the Elections Committee through the antagonism practically of Chairman French and Representative Steyer. Herman French and Kerr, with the two other bills they were placed on the calendar, bearing the name of Representatives Schriek, of Mr. Wyatt's county (Schuylkill), as though Mr. Schriek had reported them from the Appropriations Committee. Mr. Schriek, appropriations, June 24, 1897, was the reading on each of the four bills in the file. Chairman Marshall, of the Appropriations Committee, declared it a crooked job, and refused to stand for it.

News of this alarmed the Schuylkill county, including Senator Coyle, who had been Mr. Wyatt's chief banker for the position of Sergeant-at-Arms. The scare spread and Mr. Schriek not only disowned the bills, but indicated that he might take occasion to publicly clear himself, if necessary. Meanwhile the four bills had passed first reading, and were comfortably located for second reading, when Leader Lytle, to prevent scandal, successfully moved their recommitment to the Appropriations Committee that had never reported them out. Quietly a little afterwards another Schuylkill county, Representative Orme, obtained unanimous consent to introduce four bills. They were the identical Wyatt bills that had just been recommitment, and that evening, avowing the paternity of Mr. Orme instead of Mr. Schriek, the bills, through a genuine report from the committee by Chairman Marshall, were handed up for the calendar, merely for purpose sake, and with no thought that they will be passed.

Prior to this, after an alarm conference by the Schuylkill counties and their friends, Senator Coyle had caused the introduction of the four bills in the Senate, hoping to induce Senator Andrews and other leaders to work them through that body so that they could be taken up by the House at once as Senate bills, instead of depending upon the forlorn hope for the dupliques in the House.

The elections committee repudiated entirely Mr. Wyatt's demand for $2,633,333, later the bill cut down to $2,300 and even to its present figure of $1,896,100. They would have allowed him $1,000. Following were the items of Mr. Wyatt's original bill: Mileage, $537; extra car fare, $10; telegraph messages, etc., $6.03; printing subpoena notices and cards, $90; two doorknobs, $90; mileage for serving subpoenas, $155.50; serving subpoenas on 779 witnesses, $118.50; payment of witness fees, $737.50; incidentals, $65; total, $2,628.58.

A HOSPITAL ON PAPER.

Schuylkill county distinguished itself again through a bill backed specially by Senator Coyle and Representative Schriek, appropriating $10,000 for "maintenance of a hospital that does not exist." This evoked from Representative Stewart, of Philadelphia, the remark to the House that there was "nothing in the phraseology of the bill to assure the Legislature that the proposed appropriation might not give rise to another case such as that of Fayette county Representative, who, in 1883, obtained an appropriation of $20,000 for a hospital that existed only on paper, and served two years in jail for his cleverness.

This bill, introduced by Mr. Schriek, would appropriate the $10,000 "to the American Hospital Association of Mahanoy township, Schuylkill county, for the fiscal year beginning June 1, 1898, for the purpose of maintenance, provided that no part of the money shall become available until the managers of said institution shall have certified under oath to the Auditor General that they have completely furnished that building for hospital purposes with a capacity of at least 25 beds and equipped the same with the necessary surgical implements, and that the said furnishing and implements have been paid for by private subscription, and that no part of this appropriation will be used for payment of any furnishing or implements.

Mr. Schriek appealed to the House to pass the bill on second reading, on promise to furnish more information when it came up for final passage. He said it was simply a piece of spite work to attempt to kill the bill. The bill went through by a vote of 108 to 23.

Two more of the Fifth ward gang of thieves went down to the Pottsville jail this morning. They were Martin McGrath and Edward Dowd, aged about 19 years. The circumstances attending their arrest are as follows: McGrath and Dowd were in the Third and Fourth wards of the city on Saturday night. McGrath was on Centre street, west of Chestnut, when he observed five young men acting in a suspicious manner in front of Matt Yamachita, which is located on Centre street, about midway between West street and Chestnut street. McGrath concluded that there was a robbery on foot and awaited developments. Three of the gang forced open the cellar door and descended into the saloon. Two remained outside, to stand watch. McGrath waited until he saw a light in the cellar and then he made a rush. The two guardsmen gave a whistle of alarm and ran. McGrath fired a shot to attract the attention of the police. At the same time he made for the cellery. He grabbed Dowd, a second man ran out. McGrath was unable to grab him and hold him prisoner. The second man cut across the street in the direction of Cardin's paint store. McGrath drew his revolver and fired. Spectators say that the fleeing man barely escaped being hit by the bullet. He got away. McGrath, who had a light in the cellar and was waiting for the other man to escape from the cellar. He ran east on Centre street to West and then turned north. Policeman Ed. Kester had been attracted to the neighborhood of O'Hara's shop and was at the corner of Centre and John streets when he saw McGrath run around the corner of West street. Kester gave chase. He is a swift runner and turned into West street before McGrath was near Lloyd street. "Stop!" Kester shouted three times, but McGrath continued running as fast as his legs could carry him. Kester then fired a shot, which had no effect. When half way to Lloyd street Kester stumbled and fell. He quickly regained his feet, however, and resumed the chase. He cried "Stop!" twice again, but the fleeing robber paid no heed. Again Kester stumbled and fell, but he quickly recovered himself and was so angered at his misfortune that he acquired renewed speed and outdistanced his foe. McGrath, when the latter turned from West street west on Strawberry alley. As Kester turned into the alley he fired a second shot. He said today, "I was determined to follow and catch him if I had to run to Ashland and bring him down with a shot." Midway between West and Chestnut streets Kester fired a third shot, but still McGrath failed to surrender. From the alley he turned north on Chestnut street, running to Coal street, and then turned west again. Midway between Chestnut and Coal streets McGrath's pace slackened greatly. Kester was soon upon him. McGrath made a final struggle, but it was brief and useless. Kester gave him two rips on the head with his club that sent the thief down to the pavement. Soon after Chief Cook and Goodman, who had run down Centre to north on Chestnut, arrived. They found Kester and McGrath puffing like porpoises after their hard run of about six squares. Kester had put the handcuffs on McGrath and was sitting on him to take him back to the lockup. In one of the steel gears of the lockup. This morning Watchman O'Hara, and Policeman Kester took them before Justice Young. Where the saloonkeeper appeared and charged them with robbery. They were committed without bail and O'Hara and Kester took them down to Pottsville on the 9:11 train.

Both prisoners belong to a class of rogues as ever infested the town. The gang is steadily drawing nearer the end of its rope and it need not be surprising if some morning in the near future the coroner should be called upon to hold an inquest on two, or three, of its members. It is quite likely that there will then be a cessation of robberies in the town for a while. It was more good luck than anything else that saved two of them from being shot this morning. The authorities say they are determined to break up these gangs and they don't propose to take any chances by being delicate about the use of their weapons.

McGrath was arrested by Policeman Kester and Constable Bain twice within the past two weeks for attempting robberies on West Coal street, but the owners of the premises refused to prosecute and there was nothing to do but release him.

Dowd is under bail for trial at Pottsville this week on a charge of breaking into Christ Schmidt's beer refrigerator with one Cooney. It is surprising that property owners of the town will furnish bail for such characters.

When Watchman O'Hara was tending in the cellar to make the arrests some one presumably one of the fellows who had stood guard, hurled a large piece of rock from the rear of the officer, but it went wide of its mark.
