The governor and inhabitants of the island rushed down to the shore and threatened to shoot them if they land-ed. Mr. Fitch appealed to them, im-ploring them if they were Christians not to behave inhumanly. He said that his men were too weak to pull back to the ship, and that if they succeeded in getting there they would probably be drowned. He asked for assistance to take the Traveler out of her danger-

The next morning the Rodriguers sent a pilot and brought off Mrs. Christie, her surviving child and others, and then, with the assistance of blacks from the island, the survivors were taken to a desolate sand island in the vicinity, where they were kept for 22 days, living in huts made of leaves and with nothing but leaves
