EDITOR DANA

developed, and his acquaintance with French enabled him fully to understand the meaning of the exciting scenes of that day. He wrote of them in a series of letters published in the New York Tribune, and his correspond-ence is even regarded to this day as a model of that department of journal-

Undoubtedly this work brought Mr. Dana into close relations with The Tribune, for soon after he accepted an offer from Horace Greeley to become managing editor of that paper. He drew to The Tribune some of the ablest writers and thinkers of the time, and he made the paper the gospel of the thinking, conservative and cultivated elements in the community.

Mr. Dana's connection with The Tri-bune gave him an intimate acquaintance with most of the great men of the Republican party, and when in 1861, owing to a disagreement with Horace Greeley respecting the attitude of The Tribune upon the conduct of the war.

he retired, he was esteemed as one of the influential younger men of the party. Edwin M. Stanton, the secretary of war, who knew Mr. Dana well, offer-ed him the post of assistant secretary of war, and he undertook these fabors with estrangillary energy. Much of the with extraordinary energy. Much of the time he was with General Grant in the west. He was several times under fire showing great coolness and courage.

His executive capacity was never more superbly revealed than when, as the representative of the war department.

he was engaged in forwarding Grant's gigantic military schemes.

After the war Mr. Dana might have accepted several offers to re-enter business life, but the fascinations of jour-nalism caused him to decline every proposition of that sort made to him.

A company was organized to create and publish a great Republican newspaper in Chicago, and Mr. Dana was offered the editorship, and a small interest in it was given to him. At that time, how-ever, Chicago was not the great metropolitan city that it is today, and Mr. Dana found difficulties of various sorts in establishing the paper. He sold out his interest, receiving therefor some $7,000, and that was the first time in his life that he found himself possessed of any considerable sum of money. A others of his old time Republican friends, notably Colonel Fred A. Conje ling, brother of Roscoe Conkling, subscribed a sum sufficient to buy for Mr.

Dana the New York Sun, which was to spicuous career began with that issue of the paper. He called about him a competent staff, and in less than two years had in many respects revolution-ized journalistic methods. He sought for news where other editors had ig-nored it and be developed what Samuel Bowles, himself a great editor, said was the "Imagining style of reporting," now in vogue in every first class newspaper. Mr. Dana, like Caleb Cushing, seemed.

to thrive upon hard work. Mental application was a delight to him. He harned botany while riding from his office. In his spare momentahe mastered the Icelandic language. He knew Dante probably better than any other American in New York, so that when he had his interview with the pope he responded in a quotation from Dante to another which the pope had made to him.

Spanish literature delighted him, and he mastered it at odd moments.

For horses he had a passion, and he kept his health, he thought, by driving a high spirited team daily between his country place and the railway station.

Mr. Dana was fond of good cooking, and he knew wines like a connoisseur, was an excellent critic of paintings, and in his later years became fascinated over cerumics and choice pottery, the history of which he knew as though his life had been devoted to the study of it. Mr. Dana was nearly 50 years of age before he began, of his own experience, to know the luxury of wealth. When he went to The Tribune as managing editor his salary was $11 a week, and he was 45 years of age before he had re-ceived more than 150 a week. The royaities on his book of household poetry and upon Appleton's cyclopedia brought him a larger income than that, although this money came to him mostly after he became editor of The Sun. In his intter years Mr. Dana received $50,000 a year from The Sun and handsome dividends upon the stock, a majority of scheme was utopian.

From childhood Mr. Dana was of prompt decision. He reasoned early that it was better to decide wrong than to healtaic and shilly shally over a decision. Therefore when he abandoned socialism he decided to become an active, busy man of affairs and to win his way, as he believed every man his way, as he believed every man of the editors of a little weekly called The Harbinger, which advocated the socialistic idea, and this association suggested to him that journalism was his career. He was fascinated with the work even then, aithough at that thme he had not such an understanding of the news features as he came later to pessess. Anxious to put himself in touch with the world and to go to the other extreme from that represented by the provincialism of Brook Parm, Mr. Dana went to Europe. He had already learned to read French and to speak it fairly well. The facility with which he acquired languages was marvelous.

Soon after reaching Paris he spoke French with fluency, and as he was there at the time of the revolution of 1848 his newspaper instincts were fully developed, and his acquaintance with French enabled him fully to under-Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Hairrax, N. S., Got. 18.—Historic Windsor, one of the most beautiful towns in the province, was devastated by fire yesterday. For six hours, beginning shortly before 3 a. m., the fire, tanned by a violent northwest galo, raged so hercely that the local fire department was absolutely helpless to cope with it, and within half an hour after its discovery the mayor began to call for outside assistance. Long pecompletely eaten up, the area covered by the flames being almost a mile square, and of the 400 or more buildings secupying this section barely half a dozen scorehed structures remain. Only

No Nova Scotla town has ever been visited by a configuration of such di-mensions. Of the 3,500 people that in-habitated the place few have homes of their own today, Over 2,000 have been rounding country and neighboring towns, while the remainder of the sufferers have gone to Halifax or are sheltered in army tents crected in the vacant plots by a detachment of British troops from the garrison city. The disaster is appaling in its extent.

The fire started in a barn in the heart prevalling carried the flames to other to get at work, and in a short time the showers of sparks carried in all diings. The occupants of dwellings had time to harry on some clothing and to drag some household goods into the streets, but there was no place of safety to which anything could be removed quickly enough to save it from being destroyed or damaged. The flames cut a clean gap from the water's edge on the business front to the forests in

During the past few years many handsome brick structures have been erected, but these were generally con-tiguous to old wooden buildings, and all went down before the furious flames. The origin of the fire is somewhat my terious. A severe lightning storpassed over the fown before the flames burst forth and some thin's the burn is which the fire started may have be struck by lightning, but many strong support that the configuration original nated through the carelessness of some

In the hurry and excitement horses and cattle in the stables were forgotten and many perished in the flames or were suf-focated from smoke.

Relief measures were started in Hali-fax at an early hour, and yesterday afternoon a train load of provisions, tents, blankets, etc., arrived from the provincial capital.
