EARLY MORNING FIRE.

The Fire Companies Successfully Combat a Stubborn Blaze.

At about three o'clock this morning a fire alarm was sounded from box No. 17, at the P. & R. passenger station. The cause of the alarm was a fire in a double block on East Centre street, between Peach alley and Centre street. The property is owned by Charles Borbolski, grocer, and William Zalinski, saloonkeeper. Dense volumes of smoke poured from the cellars of the place, where a fire of great fury had started. The firemen responded quickly and tackled the place with a determination that resulted in excellent work. Coal oil had added the flames and made the fire one that threatened to spread rapidly, but the fire companies got it under control in remarkable short time. The floor of the grocery store was badly damaged and the saloon also suffered, but the total loss did not exceed $800. The origin of the fire could not be learned. Some believe it started from the coal oil cans in the cellar under the store, but the storekeeper insists that it started in the cellar under the saloon. The alarm was sounded by one of the P. & R. train crew that was awaiting orders at the passenger station. Two of the crew, Messrs. Thompson and Lynch, rescued a fair-haired maiden from what they thought was certain suffocation. She extends sincere thanks to the gentlemen, as to other people in the neighborhood who were rendered valuable services by the crew. Policeman Bateley had his hands and head scorched while opening the door of the cellar where the fire raged.

Funerals. The funeral of ex-Health Officer Edward Miles took place yesterday afternoon, at three o'clock, from the family residence on West Cherry street. Services were held in the Annunciation church. High mass will be celebrated in the Annunciation church tomorrow morning, at eight o'clock. There was a large attendance at the funeral, upwards of sixty carriages forming a part of the cortege. The remains were interred in the Annunciation cemetery. The pall bearers were Messrs. Patrick Conners, James Wade, James Lynch, Mark Burke, James Egan and James B. McHale. O'Hara Bros. were the funeral directors.

The funeral of John D. Schaffer took place yesterday afternoon from the family residence and the remains interred in the Old Fellows' cemetery.

A Malleous Prisoner. Shortly before midnight on Saturday Alfred F. Morgan was seen in the main alley, pair of gun boots from in front of his store on West Oak street and dashed away as fast as his legs would carry him. Chief of Police Tash and Patrolman Bolin took up the chase and arrested the thief on North Pear alley. He proved to be a notorious character named Robert Dempster who has been in jail frequently for the same kind of offenses and charges. When being locked up Dempster picked up a step bucket in his cell and threw the contents over Chief Tash and two spectators. The prisoner was committed in default of bail on the charge of larceny and will probably be also held on a charge of assault and battery by Chief Tash.

Special Church Service. Reformation Sunday was celebrated in the German Lutheran church on West Cherry street yesterday. At the morning service there was a special program by the excellent choir of the church, augmented by accompaniment given by a part of the First Lithuanian Band, under the leadership of Prof. F. Zeitz, which made the renditions of the selections "Man Singet mit freuden von Sieg" and "Jerusalem du Schone" doubly impressive. The sermon was taken from the epistle of the day. The pastor of the church, Rev. John Grubler, after the service extended a vote of thanks to Prof. Zeitz and the band for the assistance rendered in the service.

STATE POLITICS!

Real Meaning of the Meeting Between Quay and Martin.

GEN. REEDER MISREPRESENTED!

The Ex-Secretary of State Intends to Push the Alleged Bribery Suit to the End. The Capitol Commission Gets Down to Business.

Special Herald Correspondence.

Philadelphia, Nov. 1.-The seeming political separation of the week has been the visit of Senator Quay upon David Martin at the rooms of the Republican city committee in Philadelphia and his call upon Chris Magee in Pittsburg. What appears to be a remarkable proceeding, however, is simply a display of the ordinary political horse sense which Senator Quay has exercised on more than one occasion. To begin with, it can be stated as a positive fact that there have been no deals, dickers or arrangements of any political nature or any character whatever between Senator Quay and Mr. Martin or Senator Quay and Mr. Magee.

The whole purpose of his visit to the Republican city headquarters in Philadelphia was to get out as large a vote as possible for Beacom and McCauley in the city of Brotherly Love. State Chairman Elkin, who has been tireless in his work for the candidates, and for the candidates, felt that it would be better all round if a more cordial feeling was established between the state committee and the Philadelphia city committee. Heretofore these two organizations have been working on entirely independent lines, and it was felt that co-operation to a certain extent would materially aid in bringing out a large vote in this year of election.

Mr. Elkin requested Senator Quay to accompany him to the city committee rooms, and the senator readily consented. The meaning of the episode is that Senator Quay, as the chair and the leading men in the various wings of the party desired to poll the very largest possible vote in Pennsylvania this year. Senator Quay, in speaking of the meeting to a close personal friend, assured him in the most emphatic manner possible that the meeting had no significance so far as the gubernatorial and senatorial campaigns were concerned.

He added that, while he was willing to fight a fair battle at the primary election, he was not willing to go into a tight with any Republican, no matter who he might be, on election day. He said that that day was the one day in the year when all Republicans should stand shoulder to shoulder in support of a common cause against a common enemy. In this, notwithstanding the fact that every personal difference might have existed in the past, or whatever personal relations there might be in the present. That, and that alone, he declared, was the sum and total of the significance that could be attached to meetings with Mr. Martin and Mr. Magee.

One of the Philadelphia newspapers that has been attacking General Reeder for factional and personal reasons a day or two ago made the assertion that the general had the counsel present at the recent meeting between Quay and Martin, and that plans were made for discrediting the Reeder and Van Valkenburg bribery suits. So far as General Reeder is concerned the story is absolutely false. He says:

"I have no counsel except Congressman Kirkpatrick, Mr. Fox and Mr. Stewart, all of Easton, and so far as I know none of these were in Philadelphia, nor was any one else present at any interview authorized to represent me.

"I shall never at any time consent to any proposition to settle or compromise the case against me, nor shall I ever at any time give my consent to any such adjustment. My counsel is instructed to press for an early hearing, and nothing less than that will satisfy me.

"I have nothing whatever to do with the prosecution against Van Valkenburg. I did not know that any person intended arresting him until I saw in the newspapers that an arrest had been made, and from that day to this I have been in the city waiting for the prosecution of the indictment found against him.

Judge Kirkpatrick, Mr. Stewart and Mr. Fox, who were seen, all state that there is no truth in any of them were in Philadelphia at the interview as stated.

Well, the capitol commissioners have adopted the plan submitted by Henry Ives Cobb, of Chicago, and selected him as the architect to supervise the construction of the capitol building. Under the act in assembly the commissioners were obliged to select not only a plan for the legislative building, but also plans for such other buildings as may be necessary to accommodate the departments of the state government. The plans adopted cover all these buildings, although at present there is no authority for erecting any buildings except that which is for the accommodation of the general assembly.

The plans adopted contemplate the erection of three buildings running from east to west and connecting them by wings running north and south, so as to give, when all are completed and connected, practically the effect of a single structure. The central building now to be erected is for the use of the general assembly, and it is the desire of the commissioners, if possible, to add at present to the central building a portion, at least, of the connecting wings running north and south, so that the same may present a more attractive exterior.

Many excellent designs were submitted to the commissioners, but the principal consideration which led them finally to adopt the plan submitted by Mr. Cobb is to be found in the fact that his plans provided for outside light and air to both the senate and house of representatives from the same side of their respective chambers, and provided also for the erection of additional buildings for departmental purposes in the future.

The legislative building can first be constructed by itself, as shown by the drawings submitted. The amount of the appropriation will not permit of making a high dome upon this building at present, but at some future time the dome can be extended or either one or both of the additional buildings for departmental purposes can be added without interfering with the present departmental buildings. The interior partitions of the legislative building now to be constructed and the successive buildings that follow to make up the completed structure can all be effected without in any way disturbing the existing surrounding in the capitol park.

This central building, with the connecting wings running north and south, will present a handsome and dignified appearance, and will be a credit to the state. The interior partitions are all movable, although being sustained by columns, thus allowing the removal or rearrangement of the interior partitions if the demands be different in the future. In his description of the several buildings presented by the plans submitted Mr. Cobb, the architect, says:

"In order to produce the required amount of interior space for the proposed interior group of buildings contemplated there can be no waste in exterior ornamentation, and the most effective result can be obtained by concentrating all available expense for exterior ornamentation in such prominent features like a dome, that is of sufficient importance to allow the simplest treatment of the other buildings forming the group."

Colonel William A. Stone has written a letter announcing his candidacy for the governorship, and he can now be fairly regarded as formally in the field. The mention of his name has evoked favorable comment from various sources. The following editorial is from the Blueville Daily Courier: "It is reasonable to suppose that Colonel Stone's candidacy will by our people be received with some favor, partly because he is a western Pennsylvanian and partly because he has made an efficient representative. There is one thing certain, and that is that he is a true blue-American, with the name blown in the bottle. He is a good orator, of pleasing personality, able and well qualified in every respect to fill the office he is seeking for, and to support Colonel Stone would be to show loyalty to a home candidate, affection for an old soldier, devotion to an American, if such a term be allowable, recognition of ability and a well qualified disposition to reward those who fight the battles of the people. It is a little early to pledge support, however, and it is to be hoped that in the meantime Colonel Stone will make no deals, nor attempt to make them, and be a candidate standing upon his merits, and not as part of a compact or job in which the wishes of the people are not consulted or set at naught."

Campaign Literature Delayed. Postal Inspector Moore is investigating an allegation of trespassing with mail sent out by Republican County Chairman Shlay. It is claimed that at Mahanoy City and Girardville some of the headquarters' men had been purposely delayed. The Inspector arrived in Blueville on Saturday, and after an investigation there departed for Girardville and Mahanoy City. It is claimed that mail matter addressed to prominent citizens at these places was delayed by the Democratic postmistress. Inspector Moore will report the result of his investigation to the department at Washington.

GEORGE'S FUNERAL

DR. McGLYNN'S ELOQUENT WORDS.

The Priorty Friend of the Great Writer and Orator Arouses His Hearers to Applause - Splendid Police Arrangements Prevent Any Accidents, Despite the Monster Crowds That Assembled to Honor the Departed Candidate For Mayor of Greater New York.

New York, Nov. 1.-The body of Henry George lay in state yesterday in the Grand Central Palace, and 40,000 people reverently passed the casket and looked upon the face of the dead philosopher. From 9 o'clock in the morning until 3 in the afternoon a steady stream of men, women and children poured into the hall.

The immense throng was composed of representatives of all classes, of all shades of life, and of all religious opinion. On every face was stamped the unmistakable sign of sincere regret. While hundreds of faces were drawn with surprise and pain. To thousands of those who passed by, Henry George was personally known, and it was those who lingered for a longer moment to gaze again on the face of the man whom to know was to love. Some of them wept.

The children, of whom there were hundreds, were raised aloft by the guard and held while they gazed at the features of the man who died fighting to brighten their lives.

In the early dawn the body was moved in a plain hearse from the Union Square hotel to the Grand Central Palace, where it was attended, save by the guards of honor and four policemen. Behind the hearse came a single carriage, Anna George, the youngest daughter, insisted upon accompanying the body to the Grand Central Palace. No persuasion could away her from her purpose. Weeping bitterly, she stood at the head of the hearse at the hotel and begged to be permitted to go. She wished to arrange the flowers about the casket in which her father's remains repose. Pleading his father's name, she became impetuous, and refused to permit the body to be taken away unless she accompanied it. The other members of the family, though grieved, emphasized by the child's utter abandonment of anguish, yielded, and Richard George, her brother, accompanied her to the Palace. There, with loving hands, she arranged the flowers as she would have them, and permitted no one to touch the casket.

Thirty Thousand View the Body. At 9 o'clock the doors were opened, and immediately several hundred persons who had been waiting without entered the hall with bowed heads. They saw at the head of the hall in an immense bower of floral tributes a plain heavy black cloth covered casket resting on a dais. Through the glass they saw the great man reposing calmly, his features unruined, as if in sleep. The left arm rested lightly on the breast, the other by the side. The remains were clad in black iron, cloth, a white collar and a plain black tie.

For the first half hour the throng filing up the hall in twos passed at the rate of 1,500 an hour, but shortly the numbers swelled and grew until at one time 5,000 an hour, the crowd passed through the entrance into the hall, and the last two hours the crowd came at the rate of 6,000 an hour. This is the highest rate obtainable under such circumstances as these. Any greater celerity would have meant an undignified, irreverent rush.

A little before 3 o'clock the line was stopped, and those who could not get in were compelled to turn back and get out from the police lines. A careful estimate of the number who could not get in places it at 20,000. This number is equal to the number of those who passed the casket. Then another throng came - those who wished to hear the eminent clergymen praise Henry George.

The police arrangements were a credit to the city. Chief McCullagh was in personal command. Under eight captains, 22 sergeants and 54 roundmen there were 355 policemen on duty in the neighborhood and in the Palace. In the hall itself were 50 men, two sergeants and two roundmen. The system was a simple one, and by the gentlemanly conduct of every common patrolman it was possible to handle the great crowd without any disagreeable circumstances.

The Funeral Services. Before 3 o'clock the people were permitted to occupy the seats in the hall. The front seats of the main part of the hall were reserved for the intimate friends of the deceased, the pallbearers and the ushers. All the rest of the main floor was open to the crowd, and it took but a short time to fill the hall. The platform of course was reserved, and the galleries, which hold a comparatively small number, were likewise reserved for the holders of tickets.

Owing to the careful arrangement in the streets the crowd inside was not permitted to reach such proportions as would lead to unpleasant crowding, such as might result in a panic. Every seat was taken, and in certain portions a considerable number of persons were permitted to stand. It is estimated that nearly 4,000 people were in the hall during the services.

The family and intimate friends occupied the reserved seats on the right-hand, facing the platform. Young Henry George occupied the chair next to the aisle in the front row, and his mother was beside him. Mrs. George was heavily veiled when she entered the hall, but during the speaking she removed her veil and followed the remarks of each speaker attentively. While showing plainly the strain that
