Gleason made one trip to the seventh floor, carrying down a load of women, and although the smoke was rolling through the building in dense clouds he started up again. At the fourth floor he stopped to take on a crowd of girls from the rooms of the National Music company, being assisted in his work by Miss Katherine Carney, the forewoman. A man attempted to force his way into the elevator, but Gleason shoved him back into the hall, that the women might have the first chance. The man never came out. Miss Carney was a true heroine. Although at the outset she had an op-portunity to escape with the other women, she seemed to feel it her duty to stay and help the escape of the girls over whom she had charge. Her voice could be heard above the shricks of the panic stricken girls, advising them to preserve order and reassuring them again and again. She stood near the stairway, and attempted to seize the foremost women as they dashed down to the next floor, but she was thrown nside. When she saw there was no hope of stopping the panic she darted to the elevator cage to calm the others. As the elevator ascended Miss Carney or- THE FAVORITE FAMILY NEWSPAPER dered the conductor to stop. She then turned and helped her frightened charges into the cage. During all the excitement she remained caim, and issued orders as though directing the women at work. As the elevator started to descend without Miss Carney one of the girls cried to the conductor to stop, but the brave woman, though staring death in the face, shouled for them not to mind her, that she would take care of herself. With remarkable coolness she made her way to an ele-vator and thence to the streat. The The brave woman is seriously burned about the face and head. She modestly disclaims the title of heroine, but proudly dis-claims the title of heroine, but proudly declares: "All my girls escaped alive." The girls Miss Carney sent down in the elevator escaped unharmed. Two of those who bolted headlong down the narrow stairway, Josle and Annie Baxa, made their way to the second floor, but were cut off by the flames and were forced to jump from a window. They were both hadly injured.
