Another Chapter in the Great March and Victory. OUR FIGHTERS WERE EXHAUSTED

The Night of July 1 Brave Officers of High Rank Urged General Wheeler, Then in Command, to Withdraw From His Perilous Position.

Santiago de Cuba, July 28 .- Probably few European military critics will appreclate the arduous nature of the campaign so successfully terminated on the 14th inst, by the surrender of all the Spanish forces east of Santiago and the virtual abandonment of this province. by Spain.

In continental Europe, during all the wars since the Napoleonic days, it has been possible to drive armles by forced marches over long distances and to keep transportation supplies up with the advance. It will be hard, therefore, for European observers to understand the obstacles that had to be overcome in advancing an army of 15,000 men ten miles into the interior from the south coast of this province. One word tells the story-roads. The roads here are simply paths through the dense tropical forest, paths along which half a dozen ordinary ox teams haut lumbering carts once a day in comparatively dry weather. There are no bridges, and in wet weather, when the streams are raging torrents, these paths are almost impassable to men on horseback, absolutely so to vehicles of all descriptions. Thus it was that all these roads along which the troops were moved had really to be built before a single wegon train could get through. The bridges, thrown access the streams, were repeatedly swept away by high water. During the four days before the surrender it was possible to get only one light battery of the six brought by General Randotph to the front, while not a single one of the slege guns brought by General Shafter got beyond Siboney.

The men were obliged to advance in single file into the open, and at the famous assault on San Juan Hill one column marched out of the road into the open in the face of murderous artillery and rifle fire from the Spanish trenches and deployed for the charge on open ground. No finer exhi-bition of nerve could be required of a soldier than that charge across 700 yards of open territory against an enemy entrenched upon the crest of a hill. But our men never flinched.

It is one of the unwritten secrets of the battle of July 1 that the plans made the night previous did not contemplate an assault upon the works of the enemy before Santiago. Two divisions, e of General Wheeler and General Kent, were to remain in column on the main road to Santlago, to reinforce General Lawton, whose division was to assault El Cancy on the extreme right, while Grimes' battery made a diversion on the left. But when the Span-ish guns began to drop shrapnel shells over the road on which our column rested, and when word came that General Lawton was successful at El Caney, it became necessary for Wheeler's and Kent's divisions either to ad-vance, retreat or remain quiet under the storm of shell that was bursting over their heads. In these circumstances it was less dangerous to advance and charge the enemy's works than to stay where they were, and with a general impulse to get where they could return the ene-my's fire the advance regiments, the Sixth and Sixteenth, moved out. The others followed. There is a question whether any specific general command to charge was ever given. Regimental and company commanders simply led their way herolcally forward up the hill, which was taken. Our men were too much exhausted to follow up their victory, though it has since been asserted that had the pursuit been coninued that afternoon the demoralized
