the rule is absolute. He excrim with him a stock of undimmed coins of every denomination up to half dollars, beyond that erisp bills to the amount he considers necessary. That which he buys he pays for with the exact change, and should he by chance be caught without means of such precision the seller is en-titled to the full amount given him in excess of his bill. It is a sanitive measure no doubt and very interesting; but to cleave to it strictly one must needs have obliging bankers or a lien on the mint.

The method by which manual training arouses and fosters a many sided interest and stimulates desire is by giving children something to do and by allowing such a free play of choice and individuality both in the something and in the doing that at the very first possible moment the activity shall be self directed. When this point is once gained, the work of education has be-gun. Where the will is weak, as in the case of poor, anismic children, the interest may soon flag, may indeed sputter and go quite out, and all this is very discouraging. But the interest must simply be aroused and stimulated afresh. Nover, however great the seeming extremity, must the interest and desire of the teacher be made to do duty for that of the child, for the me ment this occurs the work of education ceases, and a meaningless, unpsycholog-ical process takes its place.--C.
