good work at Santingo, but the front is hardly the place for women. There never was any real scarcity of food in Cuba, but there were no transportation incluties to get supplies to the front other than pack trains. The army and the sick in the hospitals down there fared as well as possible in such a climate.

When told that it had been denied that there was yellow fever in the camp at Santiago, General Shafter said that it was nonsense, as there was yellow fever there, and the doctors in Santingo, who knew it like a book, said it was yellow fever and nothing else. Santiago was on the mend, the general Santiago was on the mend, the general said, and the sanitary measures taken Tinware and by the Americans were having good effect. When asked if it would not be almost as well to allow the more non sick at Santiago to fully recover in Cuba, now that the wet season is almost over, h said the best place for every man who could get there was home, and that, while the wet senson was murry over, Cuba was not a good country for sick men to be in, and that the conditions would remain poor for two months at least.
