Pouring Oil on Troubled Waters. The Indiana was kept dry by the drip-ping of oil from both bows, and, although ping of oil from both bows, and, although tremendous seas were running and break-ing, they could not come on board.

This was certainly a most practical il-lustration of the old saying as to the "pouring of oil on troublest waters," a proverb as old as the libbs, but only very recently applied, thanks to the hydro-graphic office of the United States, and now very conceasily followed by seamen now very generally followed by seamer the world over. It was an American also (Redfield) who first thorough found out and explained the true character of these revolving storms, and to him all seamon are forever indebted.

In using oil it is astonishing how small a quantity will suffice—just a quart or two in a bag stuffed with oakum hung over the bows and allowed to drip drop by drop on the sea, where it spreads out in a thin greasy illin over the surface of the water. Over the illin the wind slips, as it were, and has no power to bank the water up into waves which would break over the the office attesting the marvelous results of this simple agent of safety.—St Nicholas.

The Reduced Salaries

From Mahaney City Record. A Philadelphia contemporary is very much interested in advancing teachers' salaries. It learns that the average of salaries in Seranton is only $51.23 for male teachers and $32.25 for female per month, and takes occaread a lesson to the Shenaudoah School Board on its recent action in reducing teachers salaries. While it is difficult to see why a city of the wealth and standing of Scranto should not pay a higher average wage to it teachers, the Philadelphia paper fails to take into consideration the causes which prevailed to bring about a reduction of salaries in Shenandosh, It became a question whether the salaries should be main tained at rates that the revenues would not meet. It is even a question now whether the revenues will permit the payment of the lowered salaries and the expenses of a lessened school term. These metropolitan papers are accustomed to viewing questions of the salaries and the expenses of a lessened school term.
