Prosecuting /line Officials.

The superintendent and other officials of the Umpire mine in Western Pennsylvania, where a horrible disaster occurred a few days ago, will be prosecuted for violating certain provisions of the mining laws. Civil suits will also be instituted against the owners of the mine for damages by the friends of the victims. If the violation of the laws in the operating of the Umpire mine was as gross as reported, then it is hoped Chief Brownlee, of the bureau of mines. will insist upon prosecuting those through whose carelessness the disaster occurred to the full extremity of the law. The state has enacted stringent laws for the protection of the health and lives of the men who labor in the mines, and maintains at heavy expense to the people officials charged with the duty of seeing that these laws are strictly enforced. Periodically serious accidents occur which demonstrate that the laws are disregarded and even defied. In such garded and even defied. In such no proposition whatever has been ac-cases it should also be ascertained cepted. Views on both sides have been whether or not the highly-salaried mine inspectors have been faithful in enforcing the laws. They have abandant power and authority to compel strict obedience to the statutes.

It is alleged, among other things that at the Umpire mine the engine and fans on which the miners depended for safety when at their work Hall's Catarrh Core were in charge of a boy only thirteen years of age, who received the munificent compensation of 50 cents per day for filling that responsible position. The penalties provided for infractions of the mine laws are severe. but not too much so when it is considered that the lives of scores of thousands of men depend upon their strict observance. Six mouths' imprisonment and a fine of $500 awaits.
