

A GIRL WITH HERALD A SWEET

Published 1870.
It catered to the needs of every evening, except Sunday, at 100 South Main Street, near Centre.
The Herald is delivered to subscribers and the advertiser's copy is sent to the printer's office at 100 South Main Street, near Centre.
The publisher reserves the right to change the position of advertisements whenever the publication of news demands it. The right is reserved to reject any advertisement which is not paid for or which the publisher may deem unprofitable. Advertising rates are given upon application.
Entered at the postoffice at Shenandoah, Pa., as second class mail matter.
TELEPHONE CONNECTION
"All the News That's Fit to Print."
Evening Herald
WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 3, 1918.

OUR COUNTRY: First, Last and Forever.
AFTER next Saturday voters will be unable to pay taxes within the limited time to vote in November.
BALTIMORE is entirely free from municipal debt, which is really better than winning the base-ball championship.
ANOTHER new battleship, the Illinois, was launched yesterday. Uncle Sam's navy is growing rapidly under Republican administration.
THE School Board will fill two vacancies in the local corps of teachers at the meeting this evening. They will not wait for applicants.

RETURNS from our agents and newspapers for the month of September show an increased circulation for the Herald. The people will have the news, and they know where to get it.
MONTANA Republicans have dropped free silver from their platform. The silver-producing states realize that the metal has been injured by political hunting and pretension.
SOME of the Democratic writers of scathing articles on camp horrors have been called upon for their facts. Of course, they will rush forward with the particulars, unless they have mislaid them.

THE Republican party is a great promoter of labor and business interests. It is announced by the chairman of the New York clearing house committee that the dividend payments this year are the greatest in the history of the country.
LET no public official who has done his duty be sacrificed to mere public clamor, and let no public official who has neglected his duty be whitewashed. Thus speaks President McKinley. His Democratic defamers have taken to the woods.

"THE President told us to show no favoritism and bring out the facts," said one of the commissioners of the War Department, "and that is what we are going to do." An investigation of that character will spike the Democratic guns.

THE people of New York should experience no trouble in choosing between Theodore Roosevelt and Richard Croker as to which they would prefer as Chief Executive of the state. Augustus Van Wyck, if elected, would be no more Governor of New York than his brother Robert is Mayor of Greater New York. He would be simply a figurehead and the plant tool of the boss.

THE Result of Publicity. It pays to advertise. This is a trite saying, but it is none the less truthfully because true. Listen to the reward which a Milford, Del., woman receives because she advertised. She was a widow sad and lonely. When evening's shadows fell she looked and longed for the return of the husband of her bosom, but he came not. And she sat down to a cheerless supper, and companionless the evenings and the mornings wore away.
Thus it might have gone on forever had not the newspaper—that enlightening and civilizing agency—come to her assistance. She advertised. And why not? She was wasting her charms on a desert household. Many a gem of purest ray serene the dark, unorder'd, widowed households bear. So she advertised. And of the replies there were seven basketfuls. But as she only needed one, she exercised care and judgment in the assortment of the replies, and, as a result, there will shortly be a wedding in Montana.
In that far-off state another "sweeter self" was astray—he was a bachelor, and his heart yearned across the great American desert to the spot where another heart was yearning on full time—and with the aid of that civilizing agency Cupid has again scored. The bachelor has money; the widow has experience. What more is needed?
May they be happy and instill in their growing progeny the maxim that it always pays to advertise.

THE result of publicity. It pays to advertise. This is a trite saying, but it is none the less truthfully because true. Listen to the reward which a Milford, Del., woman receives because she advertised. She was a widow sad and lonely. When evening's shadows fell she looked and longed for the return of the husband of her bosom, but he came not. And she sat down to a cheerless supper, and companionless the evenings and the mornings wore away.
Thus it might have gone on forever had not the newspaper—that enlightening and civilizing agency—come to her assistance. She advertised. And why not? She was wasting her charms on a desert household. Many a gem of purest ray serene the dark, unorder'd, widowed households bear. So she advertised. And of the replies there were seven basketfuls. But as she only needed one, she exercised care and judgment in the assortment of the replies, and, as a result, there will shortly be a wedding in Montana.
In that far-off state another "sweeter self" was astray—he was a bachelor, and his heart yearned across the great American desert to the spot where another heart was yearning on full time—and with the aid of that civilizing agency Cupid has again scored. The bachelor has money; the widow has experience. What more is needed?
May they be happy and instill in their growing progeny the maxim that it always pays to advertise.

THE result of publicity. It pays to advertise. This is a trite saying, but it is none the less truthfully because true. Listen to the reward which a Milford, Del., woman receives because she advertised. She was a widow sad and lonely. When evening's shadows fell she looked and longed for the return of the husband of her bosom, but he came not. And she sat down to a cheerless supper, and companionless the evenings and the mornings wore away.
Thus it might have gone on forever had not the newspaper—that enlightening and civilizing agency—come to her assistance. She advertised. And why not? She was wasting her charms on a desert household. Many a gem of purest ray serene the dark, unorder'd, widowed households bear. So she advertised. And of the replies there were seven basketfuls. But as she only needed one, she exercised care and judgment in the assortment of the replies, and, as a result, there will shortly be a wedding in Montana.
In that far-off state another "sweeter self" was astray—he was a bachelor, and his heart yearned across the great American desert to the spot where another heart was yearning on full time—and with the aid of that civilizing agency Cupid has again scored. The bachelor has money; the widow has experience. What more is needed?
May they be happy and instill in their growing progeny the maxim that it always pays to advertise.

THE result of publicity. It pays to advertise. This is a trite saying, but it is none the less truthfully because true. Listen to the reward which a Milford, Del., woman receives because she advertised. She was a widow sad and lonely. When evening's shadows fell she looked and longed for the return of the husband of her bosom, but he came not. And she sat down to a cheerless supper, and companionless the evenings and the mornings wore away.
Thus it might have gone on forever had not the newspaper—that enlightening and civilizing agency—come to her assistance. She advertised. And why not? She was wasting her charms on a desert household. Many a gem of purest ray serene the dark, unorder'd, widowed households bear. So she advertised. And of the replies there were seven basketfuls. But as she only needed one, she exercised care and judgment in the assortment of the replies, and, as a result, there will shortly be a wedding in Montana.
In that far-off state another "sweeter self" was astray—he was a bachelor, and his heart yearned across the great American desert to the spot where another heart was yearning on full time—and with the aid of that civilizing agency Cupid has again scored. The bachelor has money; the widow has experience. What more is needed?
May they be happy and instill in their growing progeny the maxim that it always pays to advertise.

THE result of publicity. It pays to advertise. This is a trite saying, but it is none the less truthfully because true. Listen to the reward which a Milford, Del., woman receives because she advertised. She was a widow sad and lonely. When evening's shadows fell she looked and longed for the return of the husband of her bosom, but he came not. And she sat down to a cheerless supper, and companionless the evenings and the mornings wore away.
Thus it might have gone on forever had not the newspaper—that enlightening and civilizing agency—come to her assistance. She advertised. And why not? She was wasting her charms on a desert household. Many a gem of purest ray serene the dark, unorder'd, widowed households bear. So she advertised. And of the replies there were seven basketfuls. But as she only needed one, she exercised care and judgment in the assortment of the replies, and, as a result, there will shortly be a wedding in Montana.
In that far-off state another "sweeter self" was astray—he was a bachelor, and his heart yearned across the great American desert to the spot where another heart was yearning on full time—and with the aid of that civilizing agency Cupid has again scored. The bachelor has money; the widow has experience. What more is needed?
May they be happy and instill in their growing progeny the maxim that it always pays to advertise.

THE result of publicity. It pays to advertise. This is a trite saying, but it is none the less truthfully because true. Listen to the reward which a Milford, Del., woman receives because she advertised. She was a widow sad and lonely. When evening's shadows fell she looked and longed for the return of the husband of her bosom, but he came not. And she sat down to a cheerless supper, and companionless the evenings and the mornings wore away.
Thus it might have gone on forever had not the newspaper—that enlightening and civilizing agency—come to her assistance. She advertised. And why not? She was wasting her charms on a desert household. Many a gem of purest ray serene the dark, unorder'd, widowed households bear. So she advertised. And of the replies there were seven basketfuls. But as she only needed one, she exercised care and judgment in the assortment of the replies, and, as a result, there will shortly be a wedding in Montana.
In that far-off state another "sweeter self" was astray—he was a bachelor, and his heart yearned across the great American desert to the spot where another heart was yearning on full time—and with the aid of that civilizing agency Cupid has again scored. The bachelor has money; the widow has experience. What more is needed?
May they be happy and instill in their growing progeny the maxim that it always pays to advertise.

THE result of publicity. It pays to advertise. This is a trite saying, but it is none the less truthfully because true. Listen to the reward which a Milford, Del., woman receives because she advertised. She was a widow sad and lonely. When evening's shadows fell she looked and longed for the return of the husband of her bosom, but he came not. And she sat down to a cheerless supper, and companionless the evenings and the mornings wore away.
Thus it might have gone on forever had not the newspaper—that enlightening and civilizing agency—come to her assistance. She advertised. And why not? She was wasting her charms on a desert household. Many a gem of purest ray serene the dark, unorder'd, widowed households bear. So she advertised. And of the replies there were seven basketfuls. But as she only needed one, she exercised care and judgment in the assortment of the replies, and, as a result, there will shortly be a wedding in Montana.
In that far-off state another "sweeter self" was astray—he was a bachelor, and his heart yearned across the great American desert to the spot where another heart was yearning on full time—and with the aid of that civilizing agency Cupid has again scored. The bachelor has money; the widow has experience. What more is needed?
May they be happy and instill in their growing progeny the maxim that it always pays to advertise.

THE result of publicity. It pays to advertise. This is a trite saying, but it is none the less truthfully because true. Listen to the reward which a Milford, Del., woman receives because she advertised. She was a widow sad and lonely. When evening's shadows fell she looked and longed for the return of the husband of her bosom, but he came not. And she sat down to a cheerless supper, and companionless the evenings and the mornings wore away.
Thus it might have gone on forever had not the newspaper—that enlightening and civilizing agency—come to her assistance. She advertised. And why not? She was wasting her charms on a desert household. Many a gem of purest ray serene the dark, unorder'd, widowed households bear. So she advertised. And of the replies there were seven basketfuls. But as she only needed one, she exercised care and judgment in the assortment of the replies, and, as a result, there will shortly be a wedding in Montana.
In that far-off state another "sweeter self" was astray—he was a bachelor, and his heart yearned across the great American desert to the spot where another heart was yearning on full time—and with the aid of that civilizing agency Cupid has again scored. The bachelor has money; the widow has experience. What more is needed?
May they be happy and instill in their growing progeny the maxim that it always pays to advertise.

THE result of publicity. It pays to advertise. This is a trite saying, but it is none the less truthfully because true. Listen to the reward which a Milford, Del., woman receives because she advertised. She was a widow sad and lonely. When evening's shadows fell she looked and longed for the return of the husband of her bosom, but he came not. And she sat down to a cheerless supper, and companionless the evenings and the mornings wore away.
Thus it might have gone on forever had not the newspaper—that enlightening and civilizing agency—come to her assistance. She advertised. And why not? She was wasting her charms on a desert household. Many a gem of purest ray serene the dark, unorder'd, widowed households bear. So she advertised. And of the replies there were seven basketfuls. But as she only needed one, she exercised care and judgment in the assortment of the replies, and, as a result, there will shortly be a wedding in Montana.
In that far-off state another "sweeter self" was astray—he was a bachelor, and his heart yearned across the great American desert to the spot where another heart was yearning on full time—and with the aid of that civilizing agency Cupid has again scored. The bachelor has money; the widow has experience. What more is needed?
May they be happy and instill in their growing progeny the maxim that it always pays to advertise.

THE result of publicity. It pays to advertise. This is a trite saying, but it is none the less truthfully because true. Listen to the reward which a Milford, Del., woman receives because she advertised. She was a widow sad and lonely. When evening's shadows fell she looked and longed for the return of the husband of her bosom, but he came not. And she sat down to a cheerless supper, and companionless the evenings and the mornings wore away.
Thus it might have gone on forever had not the newspaper—that enlightening and civilizing agency—come to her assistance. She advertised. And why not? She was wasting her charms on a desert household. Many a gem of purest ray serene the dark, unorder'd, widowed households bear. So she advertised. And of the replies there were seven basketfuls. But as she only needed one, she exercised care and judgment in the assortment of the replies, and, as a result, there will shortly be a wedding in Montana.
In that far-off state another "sweeter self" was astray—he was a bachelor, and his heart yearned across the great American desert to the spot where another heart was yearning on full time—and with the aid of that civilizing agency Cupid has again scored. The bachelor has money; the widow has experience. What more is needed?
May they be happy and instill in their growing progeny the maxim that it always pays to advertise.

THE result of publicity. It pays to advertise. This is a trite saying, but it is none the less truthfully because true. Listen to the reward which a Milford, Del., woman receives because she advertised. She was a widow sad and lonely. When evening's shadows fell she looked and longed for the return of the husband of her bosom, but he came not. And she sat down to a cheerless supper, and companionless the evenings and the mornings wore away.
Thus it might have gone on forever had not the newspaper—that enlightening and civilizing agency—come to her assistance. She advertised. And why not? She was wasting her charms on a desert household. Many a gem of purest ray serene the dark, unorder'd, widowed households bear. So she advertised. And of the replies there were seven basketfuls. But as she only needed one, she exercised care and judgment in the assortment of the replies, and, as a result, there will shortly be a wedding in Montana.
In that far-off state another "sweeter self" was astray—he was a bachelor, and his heart yearned across the great American desert to the spot where another heart was yearning on full time—and with the aid of that civilizing agency Cupid has again scored. The bachelor has money; the widow has experience. What more is needed?
May they be happy and instill in their growing progeny the maxim that it always pays to advertise.

THE result of publicity. It pays to advertise. This is a trite saying, but it is none the less truthfully because true. Listen to the reward which a Milford, Del., woman receives because she advertised. She was a widow sad and lonely. When evening's shadows fell she looked and longed for the return of the husband of her bosom, but he came not. And she sat down to a cheerless supper, and companionless the evenings and the mornings wore away.
Thus it might have gone on forever had not the newspaper—that enlightening and civilizing agency—come to her assistance. She advertised. And why not? She was wasting her charms on a desert household. Many a gem of purest ray serene the dark, unorder'd, widowed households bear. So she advertised. And of the replies there were seven basketfuls. But as she only needed one, she exercised care and judgment in the assortment of the replies, and, as a result, there will shortly be a wedding in Montana.
In that far-off state another "sweeter self" was astray—he was a bachelor, and his heart yearned across the great American desert to the spot where another heart was yearning on full time—and with the aid of that civilizing agency Cupid has again scored. The bachelor has money; the widow has experience. What more is needed?
May they be happy and instill in their growing progeny the maxim that it always pays to advertise.

THE result of publicity. It pays to advertise. This is a trite saying, but it is none the less truthfully because true. Listen to the reward which a Milford, Del., woman receives because she advertised. She was a widow sad and lonely. When evening's shadows fell she looked and longed for the return of the husband of her bosom, but he came not. And she sat down to a cheerless supper, and companionless the evenings and the mornings wore away.
Thus it might have gone on forever had not the newspaper—that enlightening and civilizing agency—come to her assistance. She advertised. And why not? She was wasting her charms on a desert household. Many a gem of purest ray serene the dark, unorder'd, widowed households bear. So she advertised. And of the replies there were seven basketfuls. But as she only needed one, she exercised care and judgment in the assortment of the replies, and, as a result, there will shortly be a wedding in Montana.
In that far-off state another "sweeter self" was astray—he was a bachelor, and his heart yearned across the great American desert to the spot where another heart was yearning on full time—and with the aid of that civilizing agency Cupid has again scored. The bachelor has money; the widow has experience. What more is needed?
May they be happy and instill in their growing progeny the maxim that it always pays to advertise.

THE result of publicity. It pays to advertise. This is a trite saying, but it is none the less truthfully because true. Listen to the reward which a Milford, Del., woman receives because she advertised. She was a widow sad and lonely. When evening's shadows fell she looked and longed for the return of the husband of her bosom, but he came not. And she sat down to a cheerless supper, and companionless the evenings and the mornings wore away.
Thus it might have gone on forever had not the newspaper—that enlightening and civilizing agency—come to her assistance. She advertised. And why not? She was wasting her charms on a desert household. Many a gem of purest ray serene the dark, unorder'd, widowed households bear. So she advertised. And of the replies there were seven basketfuls. But as she only needed one, she exercised care and judgment in the assortment of the replies, and, as a result, there will shortly be a wedding in Montana.
In that far-off state another "sweeter self" was astray—he was a bachelor, and his heart yearned across the great American desert to the spot where another heart was yearning on full time—and with the aid of that civilizing agency Cupid has again scored. The bachelor has money; the widow has experience. What more is needed?
May they be happy and instill in their growing progeny the maxim that it always pays to advertise.

THE result of publicity. It pays to advertise. This is a trite saying, but it is none the less truthfully because true. Listen to the reward which a Milford, Del., woman receives because she advertised. She was a widow sad and lonely. When evening's shadows fell she looked and longed for the return of the husband of her bosom, but he came not. And she sat down to a cheerless supper, and companionless the evenings and the mornings wore away.
Thus it might have gone on forever had not the newspaper—that enlightening and civilizing agency—come to her assistance. She advertised. And why not? She was wasting her charms on a desert household. Many a gem of purest ray serene the dark, unorder'd, widowed households bear. So she advertised. And of the replies there were seven basketfuls. But as she only needed one, she exercised care and judgment in the assortment of the replies, and, as a result, there will shortly be a wedding in Montana.
In that far-off state another "sweeter self" was astray—he was a bachelor, and his heart yearned across the great American desert to the spot where another heart was yearning on full time—and with the aid of that civilizing agency Cupid has again scored. The bachelor has money; the widow has experience. What more is needed?
May they be happy and instill in their growing progeny the maxim that it always pays to advertise.

THE result of publicity. It pays to advertise. This is a trite saying, but it is none the less truthfully because true. Listen to the reward which a Milford, Del., woman receives because she advertised. She was a widow sad and lonely. When evening's shadows fell she looked and longed for the return of the husband of her bosom, but he came not. And she sat down to a cheerless supper, and companionless the evenings and the mornings wore away.
Thus it might have gone on forever had not the newspaper—that enlightening and civilizing agency—come to her assistance. She advertised. And why not? She was wasting her charms on a desert household. Many a gem of purest ray serene the dark, unorder'd, widowed households bear. So she advertised. And of the replies there were seven basketfuls. But as she only needed one, she exercised care and judgment in the assortment of the replies, and, as a result, there will shortly be a wedding in Montana.
In that far-off state another "sweeter self" was astray—he was a bachelor, and his heart yearned across the great American desert to the spot where another heart was yearning on full time—and with the aid of that civilizing agency Cupid has again scored. The bachelor has money; the widow has experience. What more is needed?
May they be happy and instill in their growing progeny the maxim that it always pays to advertise.

THE result of publicity. It pays to advertise. This is a trite saying, but it is none the less truthfully because true. Listen to the reward which a Milford, Del., woman receives because she advertised. She was a widow sad and lonely. When evening's shadows fell she looked and longed for the return of the husband of her bosom, but he came not. And she sat down to a cheerless supper, and companionless the evenings and the mornings wore away.
Thus it might have gone on forever had not the newspaper—that enlightening and civilizing agency—come to her assistance. She advertised. And why not? She was wasting her charms on a desert household. Many a gem of purest ray serene the dark, unorder'd, widowed households bear. So she advertised. And of the replies there were seven basketfuls. But as she only needed one, she exercised care and judgment in the assortment of the replies, and, as a result, there will shortly be a wedding in Montana.
In that far-off state another "sweeter self" was astray—he was a bachelor, and his heart yearned across the great American desert to the spot where another heart was yearning on full time—and with the aid of that civilizing agency Cupid has again scored. The bachelor has money; the widow has experience. What more is needed?
May they be happy and instill in their growing progeny the maxim that it always pays to advertise.

THE result of publicity. It pays to advertise. This is a trite saying, but it is none the less truthfully because true. Listen to the reward which a Milford, Del., woman receives because she advertised. She was a widow sad and lonely. When evening's shadows fell she looked and longed for the return of the husband of her bosom, but he came not. And she sat down to a cheerless supper, and companionless the evenings and the mornings wore away.
Thus it might have gone on forever had not the newspaper—that enlightening and civilizing agency—come to her assistance. She advertised. And why not? She was wasting her charms on a desert household. Many a gem of purest ray serene the dark, unorder'd, widowed households bear. So she advertised. And of the replies there were seven basketfuls. But as she only needed one, she exercised care and judgment in the assortment of the replies, and, as a result, there will shortly be a wedding in Montana.
In that far-off state another "sweeter self" was astray—he was a bachelor, and his heart yearned across the great American desert to the spot where another heart was yearning on full time—and with the aid of that civilizing agency Cupid has again scored. The bachelor has money; the widow has experience. What more is needed?
May they be happy and instill in their growing progeny the maxim that it always pays to advertise.

THE result of publicity. It pays to advertise. This is a trite saying, but it is none the less truthfully because true. Listen to the reward which a Milford, Del., woman receives because she advertised. She was a widow sad and lonely. When evening's shadows fell she looked and longed for the return of the husband of her bosom, but he came not. And she sat down to a cheerless supper, and companionless the evenings and the mornings wore away.
Thus it might have gone on forever had not the newspaper—that enlightening and civilizing agency—come to her assistance. She advertised. And why not? She was wasting her charms on a desert household. Many a gem of purest ray serene the dark, unorder'd, widowed households bear. So she advertised. And of the replies there were seven basketfuls. But as she only needed one, she exercised care and judgment in the assortment of the replies, and, as a result, there will shortly be a wedding in Montana.
In that far-off state another "sweeter self" was astray—he was a bachelor, and his heart yearned across the great American desert to the spot where another heart was yearning on full time—and with the aid of that civilizing agency Cupid has again scored. The bachelor has money; the widow has experience. What more is needed?
May they be happy and instill in their growing progeny the maxim that it always pays to advertise.

THE result of publicity. It pays to advertise. This is a trite saying, but it is none the less truthfully because true. Listen to the reward which a Milford, Del., woman receives because she advertised. She was a widow sad and lonely. When evening's shadows fell she looked and longed for the return of the husband of her bosom, but he came not. And she sat down to a cheerless supper, and companionless the evenings and the mornings wore away.
Thus it might have gone on forever had not the newspaper—that enlightening and civilizing agency—come to her assistance. She advertised. And why not? She was wasting her charms on a desert household. Many a gem of purest ray serene the dark, unorder'd, widowed households bear. So she advertised. And of the replies there were seven basketfuls. But as she only needed one, she exercised care and judgment in the assortment of the replies, and, as a result, there will shortly be a wedding in Montana.
In that far-off state another "sweeter self" was astray—he was a bachelor, and his heart yearned across the great American desert to the spot where another heart was yearning on full time—and with the aid of that civilizing agency Cupid has again scored. The bachelor has money; the widow has experience. What more is needed?
May they be happy and instill in their growing progeny the maxim that it always pays to advertise.

THE result of publicity. It pays to advertise. This is a trite saying, but it is none the less truthfully because true. Listen to the reward which a Milford, Del., woman receives because she advertised. She was a widow sad and lonely. When evening's shadows fell she looked and longed for the return of the husband of her bosom, but he came not. And she sat down to a cheerless supper, and companionless the evenings and the mornings wore away.
Thus it might have gone on forever had not the newspaper—that enlightening and civilizing agency—come to her assistance. She advertised. And why not? She was wasting her charms on a desert household. Many a gem of purest ray serene the dark, unorder'd, widowed households bear. So she advertised. And of the replies there were seven basketfuls. But as she only needed one, she exercised care and judgment in the assortment of the replies, and, as a result, there will shortly be a wedding in Montana.
In that far-off state another "sweeter self" was astray—he was a bachelor, and his heart yearned across the great American desert to the spot where another heart was yearning on full time—and with the aid of that civilizing agency Cupid has again scored. The bachelor has money; the widow has experience. What more is needed?
May they be happy and instill in their growing progeny the maxim that it always pays to advertise.

THE result of publicity. It pays to advertise. This is a trite saying, but it is none the less truthfully because true. Listen to the reward which a Milford, Del., woman receives because she advertised. She was a widow sad and lonely. When evening's shadows fell she looked and longed for the return of the husband of her bosom, but he came not. And she sat down to a cheerless supper, and companionless the evenings and the mornings wore away.
Thus it might have gone on forever had not the newspaper—that enlightening and civilizing agency—come to her assistance. She advertised. And why not? She was wasting her charms on a desert household. Many a gem of purest ray serene the dark, unorder'd, widowed households bear. So she advertised. And of the replies there were seven basketfuls. But as she only needed one, she exercised care and judgment in the assortment of the replies, and, as a result, there will shortly be a wedding in Montana.
In that far-off state another "sweeter self" was astray—he was a bachelor, and his heart yearned across the great American desert to the spot where another heart was yearning on full time—and with the aid of that civilizing agency Cupid has again scored. The bachelor has money; the widow has experience. What more is needed?
May they be happy and instill in their growing progeny the maxim that it always pays to advertise.

THE result of publicity. It pays to advertise. This is a trite saying, but it is none the less truthfully because true. Listen to the reward which a Milford, Del., woman receives because she advertised. She was a widow sad and lonely. When evening's shadows fell she looked and longed for the return of the husband of her bosom, but he came not. And she sat down to a cheerless supper, and companionless the evenings and the mornings wore away.
Thus it might have gone on forever had not the newspaper—that enlightening and civilizing agency—come to her assistance. She advertised. And why not? She was wasting her charms on a desert household. Many a gem of purest ray serene the dark, unorder'd, widowed households bear. So she advertised. And of the replies there were seven basketfuls. But as she only needed one, she exercised care and judgment in the assortment of the replies, and, as a result, there will shortly be a wedding in Montana.
In that far-off state another "sweeter self" was astray—he was a bachelor, and his heart yearned across the great American desert to the spot where another heart was yearning on full time—and with the aid of that civilizing agency Cupid has again scored. The bachelor has money; the widow has experience. What more is needed?
May they be happy and instill in their growing progeny the maxim that it always pays to advertise.

MRS. PINKHAM TALKS ABOUT OVARITIS.

Letter from Mrs. Carrie F. Tromper that all Suffering Women Should Read.

Ovaritis or inflammation of the ovaries may result from sudden stopping of the monthly flow, from inflammation of the womb, and many other causes. The slightest indication of trouble with the ovaries should claim your instant attention. It will not cure itself, and a hospital operation with all its terrors may easily result from neglect. The fullest counsel on this subject can be secured without cost by writing to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., and asking for her advice. Your letter will be confidential and sent you free of charge.

Mrs. CARIE F. TROMPER, Lake, Ind., whose letter we print, is only one of many that have been cured of ovarian troubles by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"I DREAM OF PINKHAM—I was suffering from congestion of the ovaries, misplacement of the womb, irregular, scanty, and painful menstruation, also kidney trouble. I had let it go on until I could not sit up, and could not straighten my left leg. My physician gave me relief, but failed to cure me. Reading the testimonials of different women, telling what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for them, I decided to give it a trial. I had almost given up hope, as I had suffered untold agony. The first dose helped me. And now, after using eight bottles of Vegetable Compound, one bottle of Blood Purifier, one box of Liver Pills, I am proud to say I am as well as I ever was. I might have saved a large doctor's bill and much suffering, had I tried your precious medicine in the beginning of my sickness. All in the village knew I was not expected to live, when I had the first and second attacks. In fact, I had no hope until I began taking your Vegetable Compound. It has saved my life."

A Million Women Have Been Benefited by Mrs. Pinkham's Advice and Medicine

Young Shaw Again on Trial.
Clenden, N. J., Oct. 2.—The great case in the previous trial of young Ed Shaw, when he was arraigned on the charge of murdering his grandmother, Mrs. Emma Zane, and acquitted, was noticeably lacking yesterday, when Shaw was again placed on trial for his life in the Camden court for the murder of his mother, Mrs. Sarah Shaw. Since the acquittal of Shaw on the charge of killing his grandmother the morbid desire of the throngs who were so persistent in their attendance at the first trial seems to have been satisfied. The case now evidently has no elements of sensationalism for the crowd.

A boon to travelers. Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. Cures dysentery, diarrhea, sickness, nausea. Pleasant to take. Acts promptly.

THE PRODUCE MARKETS

As Reported by Dealers in Philadelphia and Baltimore.

Philadelphia, Oct. 2.—Wheat: winter super, $1.15; Pennsylvania roller, extra, $1.25; city mill, extra, $1.20; No. 1, $1.15; No. 2, $1.10; No. 3, $1.05; No. 4, $1.00; No. 5, $0.95; No. 6, $0.90; No. 7, $0.85; No. 8, $0.80; No. 9, $0.75; No. 10, $0.70; No. 11, $0.65; No. 12, $0.60; No. 13, $0.55; No. 14, $0.50; No. 15, $0.45; No. 16, $0.40; No. 17, $0.35; No. 18, $0.30; No. 19, $0.25; No. 20, $0.20; No. 21, $0.15; No. 22, $0.10; No. 23, $0.05; No. 24, $0.00.

THE SOUTHERN RAILWAY

The Southern Railway has issued for free distribution, a sixteen page journal descriptive of Virginia, North and South Carolina, Tennessee, Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi. Persons seeking new locations, or capitalists desiring to make safe and profitable investments will find the information contained therein both valuable and interesting. Copies will be mailed free upon application to John M. Beall, District Passenger Agent, 828 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, Pa.

TO CURE A Cold in One Day

Take Laxative Bromo Quinine Tablets. All druggists refund the money if it fails to cure. The genuine has L. B. Q. on each tablet.

ANOTHER BIG BATTLESHIP.

Forty Thousand People Witness the Launch of the Illinois.
Newport News, Va., Oct. 5.—A most enthusiastic plaudits of nearly 40,000 intensely interested people, the special salute of steam whistles from many boats and tugs, and the strains of "The Star Spangled Banner," the first class battleship Illinois slid into the water yesterday. The launch was a brilliant success in every particular, the mechanical preparations being perfect. The sponsor of the vessel, Mrs. Nathan L. Latta of Chicago, was accompanied by Governor Tanner, of Illinois, his staff, in full uniform, and a crowd of distinguished Chicagoans, including Mayor Carter Harrison. Among the other guests were Governor Taylor of Virginia, Mrs. John A. Logan, Judge Advocate General and Mrs. Lemly, Senator and Mrs. Mason, Assistant Secretary Melville, Congressman Foss and many others. Notable among the vessels in the harbor was the president's dispatch boat Dolphin, having on board Assistant Secretary of the Navy Allen and a party of Washingtonians.

Haywood Released From Custody.

Omaha, Neb., Oct. 5.—Herjamin J. Haywood, ex-treasurer of the state of Pennsylvania, who was arrested charged with complicity with Senator Matthew Quay and others in alleged misuse of state funds, has been released from police custody in response to a telegram from District Attorney Graham of Philadelphia. Mr. Haywood will probably not leave for Philadelphia for several days, as he wants to spend a few days at the exposition. Mr. Haywood said the order for his arrest was issued in a manner which could not be justified in any manner, and he could be implicated in the affair, as he had no connection whatever with the People's bank of Philadelphia at the time or prior to its failure.

ALL QUIET AT PEKIN.

Chinamen Who Insulted Europeans.
Pekin, Oct. 2.—There is an entire absence of excitement here, and the streets are as quiet as those of London. The decision of the Russian legation to increase the strength of its escort or guard is calculated to have an injurious effect in keeping up the feeling of excitement. This state has abated the British minister, Sir Claude Macdonald, to follow suit, and a detachment of British marines has been ordered to the capital for the protection of the legation of Great Britain.

THE MURDER OF MRS. LEONARD.

Joseph Brown Declares That Minus Doloney Struck the Fatal Blow.
Chester, Pa., Oct. 5.—Joseph Brown and Minus Doloney, accused of the Leonard murder, were given a hearing jointly before Mayor Black and Coroner T. H. Minshall yesterday. Brown confessed that on the fatal Friday night that he and Minus Doloney got up to get some of Peter Leonard's chickens, and while they were there Peter Leonard came out of the cabin and he struck him with a piece of wood. "When he fell in a heap I got scared and started towards Doloney's cabin. Minus Doloney went for Mrs. Leonard, as she stood near a peach tree. He struck her and she fell all in a heap and gave a scream. She did not make an outcry at the time. She was hit too hard to make an outcry. I do not know what she was hit with, but it was something heavy."

Three Sufocated in a Well.

Paoli, Kan., Oct. 5.—Report comes from Somerset, 12 miles from Paoli, of the suffocation of three men in a well on the farm of James Harner. After an explosion of dynamite in the bottom of the well William Ballard, Bert Pavis and John Gatlin went into the well, one after the other. When no sign came from the men below Bob Coffey went down with a rope tied around his body. Coffey, too, succumbed to the deadly gases, but not until he had tied the rope around the body of one of the men, John Gatlin, who was brought up in a dying condition. Ballard and Pavis were brought up dead. Coffey was revived.

A Clever Trick

It certainly looks like it, but there is really no trick about it. Anybody can try it. It is his back and neck aches, malaria or nervous troubles. We mean he can cure himself right away by taking Electric Bitters. This medicine tones up the whole system, restores the vitality of the liver and kidneys, is a blood purifier and nerve tonic. It cures constipation, headache, fainting spells, sleeplessness and melancholy. It is sold by all druggists and is guaranteed to restore the system to its natural vigor. Try Electric Bitters and be convinced that they are a miracle worker. Every bottle guaranteed. Only 50c a bottle at A. Wasky's drug store.

Schooner Lost and Eight Drowned.

Charleston, S. C., Oct. 5.—The four masted schooner Sarah L. Palmer, Captain Whittier, with phosphate rock from Charlotte Harbor to Carteret, N. J., was lost in a fierce storm Sunday morning off Stone Inlet, seven miles south of Charleston. As the vessel was sinking Saturday night her crew took to the rigging, where they remained until Sunday morning, when they tried to take to the boats. One boat was smashed and one sunk. The captain was washed away three times, finally sinking. Ten negroes were washed overboard at Edisto Island and landed at Charleston yesterday. Besides the captain six men were washed overboard. The drowned are Captain Whittier, First Mate Briggs, Second Mate McDonald, Steward Pat Rely, Seaman Thomas Forebort, Walter Stancliffe, Joe Myers and James Hoot, the two latter colored.

Dr. John Hall's Funeral.

New York, Oct. 5.—The funeral services of Dr. John Hall, late pastor of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church, were held at that church yesterday. The body lay in the plain oak coffin in which it was brought from Ireland. The services were conducted by Rev. Dr. Wallace Radcliffe, moderator of the general assembly of the Presbyterian church; Rev. Dr. William M. Paxton, of Princeton Theological seminary; Rev. Hugh Pritchard and Rev. Dr. I. H. Polhemus, D. D. Addresses were made by the first two clergymen. The principal address was made by Dr. Paxton, a lifelong friend of the deceased. He read a letter to day consisted of a prayer by Rev. John S. Macintosh and the reading of the burial service. Interment was in Woodlawn cemetery.

Poverty No Ground for Divorce.

St. Louis, Oct. 5.—In the court of appeals yesterday Judge Bland set aside the divorce obtained recently at Springfield, Mo., by Mrs. Isabella Campbell from her husband, William C. Campbell. Mrs. Campbell sued her husband for divorce on the grounds of desertion and general indignities, and was granted a decree, with the custody of the two children. Judge Bland decides that the divorce was an injustice to Mr. Campbell. He said the evidence went to show that Campbell was a poor man, but that he was not, while his wife had $10,000 in property and a fixed income of $50 a month besides. The husband's only offense was his poverty. Judge Bland said there was no law in Missouri which made poverty a ground for divorce.

Oh, the Pain of Rheumatism!