HOBO CONVENTION.

The Sunbury Police Give Them Quarters in Jail.

According to the Democrat of Sunbury last Monday was "Hobo Day" in that town. The incoming freight trains on both railroads carried large numbers of passengers and by noon fully fifty representatives from every part of the state had arrived and reported to the secretary, who was located near the mill mill.

About noon delegate John Shannon, of Shenandoah, called at the home of Mr. Whalen and demanded something to eat. On being refused he became very abusive and used very insulting language. Mrs. Whalen's son, Daniel, who is one of Uncle Sam's volunteer soldiers and a good one at that, appeared on the scene and when Dan was through John looked as if he had gone through a western cyclone.

Chief of Police Starner, Officer Mettler and Constable Sterner stampeded the convention and made a general round-up, landing eight in the lockup and jail for the night. A number of revolvers and a large stick of dynamite was found in their possession. At the hearing before Justice Keller Tuesday morning, they received the following sentences: Jas. Delaney, Senanton, 30 days; Wm. Lany, Tyrone, 25 days; Ed. Clark, Philadelphia, 30 days; John Shannon, Shenandoah, 3 months; John Dempsey, Pittsburg, 48 hours; John Kelley, Lost Creek, 48 hours; Jas. Murry, Johnstown, 48 hours.

The coroner's jury found the following verdict: "That George Harnysek died on the night of October 2, at the Pottsville hospital from head injuries due to a blow from a beer glass in the hands of Matyas Wargo."

BURIAL OF A SOLDIER.

Imposing Services Over the Remains of the Plattsburg Recruit.

BURIED WITH MILITARY HONORS

The Cortage Was Made up of Grand Army Veterans and Their Sons, the Lithuanian Band, and a Detachment of Volunteers as Pall Bearers.

The funeral of Andre Sandomicz in town this morning was an imposing event and reflected credit upon the citizens who directed the arrangements. There was a pathetic side to the demonstration that afforded opportunity for reflection, and those who took advantage of it were the more deeply impressed with the ceremonies.

Sandomicz was a young man who came to this country a stranger and had but one relative in the country, a brother who resided in the western part of this state. The deceased enlisted under Lieut. Siviter in town last August and was sent to Camp Little Springs to join the 21st Infantry of the regular army. He was one of the finest physical specimens that Lieut. Siviter reported to his instructions and he caused some surprise. When the 21st Infantry was ordered back to Plattsburg, N. Y., Sandomicz went with it and soon after his arrival at the barracks was stricken down by fever. When the young man died the Plattsburg authorities telegraphed to this town for instructions as to the disposition of the remains. The reply was one to receive the telegram but the man with whom the deceased boarded before he recruited, Frank Miernicki, of South West street. The latter was no relative of the deceased, and no particular ties existed between them, but after consultation with some friends Mr. Miernicki concluded that if the government would pay for the transportation of the remains they would be given respectable burial here. The government pays for the transportation of remains from Plattsburg and there was no delay on that score, so Miernicki and his friends proceeded with the arrangements that culminated so impressively this morning.

At the appointed hour the cortage was formed at Mr. Miernicki's house. The remains reposed upon a neat cloth covered casket on which rested an American flag and two beautiful wreaths of flowers. The cortage was led by Mrs. Estrella Gony and William Malia, representative of the G. A. R. They were followed by the First Lithuanian Band, members of Watkin Waters Post 146, G. A. R., a firing squad from Henry Horncastle Camp No. 40, Sons of Veterans, a squad of members of the Fourth and Eighth Pa. Vols. who are home on furloughs, and a number of country people of the deceased brought up in the rear. There were also several carriages in line. The remains were taken to St. Casimir's Polish Roman Catholic church on North Jardin street, when the pastor, Rev. J. A. Lenarkiewicz, officiated at high mass. The clergyman took occasion to thank the Lithuanian band and all who had interested themselves in the funeral. Interment was made in the Polish cemetery. The service at the grave was concluded with the usual military honors by the firing squad and the stranger in a strange land was left to rest in peace.

The pall bearers were Messrs. John Jones, Edward Starr, Joseph Peters, W. J. James, Harry Hafner and John Hutton, six of the young men who recently returned from Uncle Sam's camp fields.

Card of Thanks.
The undersigned desires to thank the citizens of Shenandoah for assistance in the arrangements for and conduct of the funeral of the late Andre Sandomicz. Especially does he thank the members of Watkin Waters Post No. 146, G. A. R., Henry Horncastle Camp No. 40, S. of V., the Volunteers and First Lithuanian Band for co-operation and attendance. A. P. TABOR, Chief Burgess.

Denies the Statements.
EDITOR HERALD:—I want to say that there is no truth in the statements published in the News that my father, John McHugh, was ill treated by me while under my care. I can prove this statement by neighbors and officials at the almshouse. I called at the News office and demanded a retraction from the editor, but he refused to do so. I think it is a shame that the editor should so misrepresent people and then refuse to make a correction. MARY ANN LINTUS.

THE WAR INVESTIGATION.

More Evidence That Charges of Neglect Were Exaggerated.

Washington, Oct. 3.—Three witnesses were before the war investigating commission yesterday—General Greene, who participated in the battle at Manila; Colonel Lee, chief quartermaster at Camp Thomas, and Major Hersey, who was for a time in command of the Roosevelt rough riders. Each gave testimony covering his experiences, and while each one admitted the possibility of individual cases of suffering and discomfort all said that in the vast majority of cases complaints were exaggerated, if not without foundation. They agreed in saying that no army was ever so abundantly and luxuriously supplied as was the American army in a Spanish war.

Colonel Lee dwelt upon the national difficulties of supplying an army of 56,000 men. They were impatient, as a rule, and seemed to expect to be able to turn a faucet and get everything they wanted upon the spur of the moment. The hospital and ambulance corps had been fully fitted out with everything, including floors. He had not furnished water boilers as promptly as at first demanded, because the commanding officer had not given the order. He ordered them later, and many of them were not used. They seemed to want them, and not to want them before they got them, and not to want them after they came," said the colonel.

In conclusion Colonel Lee said he believed that the department should have credit for what it done, and not be blamed for what it had not done, and he thought the accusations of the past five months were simply marvelous.

Taxpayers' Association Meeting.
The Taxpayers' Association held its regular meeting yesterday, but the session was confined to routine business. Attorneys John Whalen and Fergus Farquhar were instructed to be ready to argue the bond case before the Supreme Court at Pittsburg, on October 10. The question of outdoor relief, which is being investigated by the association, was discussed at considerable length and reports received show that the Directors of the Poor are being imposed upon by a number of undeserving people. One case was reported of a family that has been receiving orders notwithstanding the fact that the father and a son are working regularly in the mines and a daughter is drawing a good salary as a school teacher.—Journal.

The scenery is elaborate, among the settings being a view of the Hudson river, Grant's Tomb, and Riverside Drive. Many musical novelties will also be introduced. GENERAL BACON UNHURT.

He Returns to Walker With His Heroic Band.

EXPECTS NO FURTHER TROUBLE.

Correspondent J. C. Beaton Gives a Graphic Story of the Battle and Tells How Colonel Sheehan Saved the Lives of the Newspaper Men—Gallant Officers Who Stood in the Open While Urging on Their Brave Men—General Bacon Has No Need of Reinforcements, and There Is No Fear of a General Uprising.

Walker, Minn., Oct. 3.—J. C. Beaton, one of the three newspaper men marched with General Bacon's troops on Sugar Point, writes the Minneapolis Tribune a long account of the battle. After describing the landing he says: "As there was no indication of trouble Brill, Knappen and myself made up our minds to go back to Walker on the boat to be sent by General Bacon for the tents and rations for another day. We were down at the landing, waiting for rowboats to take us to the steamer, when a shot was heard. Immediately we ran back to the crest of the hill, when a volley came from the woods to the front of us.

"Run to cover," some one cried, and as the soldiers grabbed their guns and ran to the left I hurried down to the beach, where I was soon safely housed behind big boulders and brush. As I ran down, however, more bullets chased me, and it was a wonder that myself and those with me were not killed.

"Steady, men, steady" was the first sound of a voice we heard, and as I raised my head I could see General Bacon running about with his troops. "Get up in the firing line," was the next order given, and the men of the fighting third were seen to run through the grass and woods in the direction from which the shots had been fired.

Another peep above the stone behind which I lay, and a peep at a great chance of death, and I saw Major Wilkinson and Lieutenant Ross calling to their men to advance. All the time the shots were fast and furious, and the bullets flew a few inches above our heads as we lay on the beach.

The Gallant Officers.
The men continued to advance. The three officers were everywhere, Major Wilkinson in charge of the left flank, General Bacon in charge of the center and Lieutenant Ross in charge of the right flank. The soldiers were running along, it appeared to me, on their hands and knees, dropping every moment to fire a volley into the ranks of the enemy. The officers, however, stood in the open. They were brave almost to recklessness and seemed only to consider the safety of their men for they advised them what to do in tones that could be heard all over the point.

For 30 minutes there was a ceaseless roar, and every little while we could hear cries of the men who had been shot. I looked up once and saw that Major Wilkinson had been injured, but where I did not know. I heard him cry: "Ross, I've been wounded, but won't give up, for it's not bad."

The next moment, as he stood right back of his firing line, calling to his men, "Give it to them, boys; you got them going; give it to them; they are cowards, and they're going to run," he seemed to stagger and Surgeon Ross ran towards him.

"Give them hell, general, give them hell," Wilkinson called at the top of his voice over toward the central flank, where General Bacon was taking aim at a red man. Then he fell into the arms of the doctor, who carried him into the log cabin at the crest of the hill, where he died in one hour and 30 minutes later. He was the death of a soldier, and such a death as he expressed to me a few minutes before he desired to experience.

About the same time the major fell Private Powell, who was running from one cover to another, was seen to drop, and in the evening after darkness had come he was carried to the little cabin, the victim of another bullet from the Indians' Winchesters.

Death of Sergeant Butler.
The stripes on the sleeves of another man whom I saw throw up his hands and drop his gun told me that a sergeant had been hit. As he fell he clapped one of his hands to his head, and afterwards I learned that he was Sergeant Butler, and that he had been killed instantly by a shot through his head.

As Butler fell Lieutenant Ross, who had charge of the two flanks after the injury sustained by Major Wilkinson, was seen to drop upon his knees and fire in the direction in which the shot that killed Butler had come. They told me afterwards that Ross got his man.

After that the men were out of sight up in the woods and behind the cabin, and we could only lay on the beach and wonder when our end would come, for we did not know but that the soldiers had been annihilated. There was no let up in the firing.

Suddenly to our right we heard the voice of Colonel Sheehan, of St. Paul, deputy United States marshal. We
