years alone. The pinched face, the harsh voice, the angular form, the hollow eyes, the irritable dispositionsuch are the indications of premature age. Many women are older at thirty than others are at fifty. There are many ills peculiar to women, and nearly all of them are of nervous character. Possibly a delicate constitution may have been inherited. Overwork and worry may have brought on a condition of exhaustion which no amount of rest can overcome. Lack of vitality means weak or impure blood, and the slightest exertion is more enervating to people in such condition than hard and continuous labor to those in good health. Poor blood fails to give proper nutri-tion to the nerves, and trifling annoynnces are soon magnified. The slightest noise becomes a scrious shock. A dis-ngreeable word or a funcied slight is ked upon as some great sorrow. Headaches become frequent. Neural-giac pains are an almost unendurable flanced up and could see the veteran Indian fighter leading an advance by a portion of the right flank.

You've got them whipped, boys; you've got them whipped. Give it to them, give it to them," the colonel was yelling at the top of his voice.

Every time his voice was heard a volley rang out and every time it was further away from us. Afterwards we learned that we had the colonel to thank for our lives. Some Indians had attempted to turn our right flank and attack the civilians on the beach. The colonel saw us and realized our danger, and his gallant attack had undoubtedly saved our lives. As it was bullets flew about our heads, and the stumps, weeds and stones about us were peppered for several yurds.

When we realized the position in which the colonel was in we called him to get under cover, but he paid no attention to us. He stayed with the men until he had accomplished his purpose, and when we had about made up our minds that he was dead we were startled by a move in the weeds above UB.

Colonel Sheehan Wounded. "I've been wounded, boys; I've been wounded," was the remark we heard as the weeds parted and the gallant colonel fell to the ground before us. We did not know how badly he was hurt, but saw two holes were in his cont sleeve.

"That's not it," he said as we turned back his sleeve. "It's my stomach; look at it." And we did so. We tore open his clothes and found only a small wound, but the blood was trickling down. The old man was not frightened by any means.

"If you ever get out of here alive, boys, you will be in luck," he remarked a few minutes afterwards, as he lay on the beach.

We lay in wait for some time, and finally I started out to reconnoiter. It did not take me long to learn that our troops were masters of the situation, and we at once summoned the company physician, who attended to Colonel Sheehan's wound, which proved to be not serious.

The agency Indians have been disposed to be peaceful, but Thursday night one of the Indian police was killed by the troops by mistake, and the Indiana were for a time disposed to be hostile. The occurrence was most unfortunate, but it is hard to see how any blame can be attached to the troops. The Indian policeman, Ruslin, who was said to be one of the best of the agency Indians, had accompanied the troops and had fought valiantly. but towards night he thought he had had enough of it and started with another Indian policeman for the agency along the shore without notifying General Bacon. He was seen in the darkness by the troops, and taken for a hostile. He was riddled with bullets, Holcomb more than they expected when it requested the latter to decide whether the regiment of Nebraska Volunteers, now at Manila or that commanded by Col. Bryan shall be mustered out of the service. It was a clear case of beating these two very cute politicians at their own game. They expected the War Department to name the regiment to be mustered out, and were prepared to charge injustice no matter which was chosen. Now, they are bound to keep their mouths closed, and Col. Bryan himself must take the responsibility of deciding whether his regiment remains in service or is mustered out.
