The Judiciary.

A matter of great importance to the people of this county is the election of a Judge of the Common Pleas for the next ten years. It would have been the fair and proper thing for the Democratic party to endorse the Hon, R. B. Koch to succeed himself. They should have done what the Republicans did last year in endorsing Judge Eschtel to succeed himself, at a time when the four members of the court were Democrats. The Republican party believed in a non-partisan Judiciary, so declared in its resolutions, and nominated Judge O. P. Bechtel, a Democrat.

A Democratic contemporary a day or so ago gave a definition of a nonpartisan judiciary, but no one took the paper to be serious in the definigion it mave.

The editor in question actually tries to make people believe that a judiciary is non-partisan when it is en. Ins. Co. tirely composed of members of one political party. We would like to have him again define a non-partisan judiciary, for every time he does it makes votes for Judge Koch. We are fully persuaded that the aforesaid editor does not know what a non-
