"There were a good many of these scat-tered over our part of the hill, and when Mende comprehended what the boys were doing he was greatly pleased. He dis-mounted and in a quiet sort of way pro-ceeded to supervise the collection of shells. He was in fatigue dress and wore no shoulder straps, and none of the men rec-ognized him. Doctors had given his case up as hopeless and ad-used keeping him quiet till the end should come, but it was his good for-tune to find that priceless remedy, Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and in the following letter he states the result. following letter he states the result.

Grass Lake, Mich., Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind. I have been troubled with heart disease 15 years or more. Most of the time I was so bad it was not safe for me to go out alone. If overtaken by one of my dizzy spells, I would fall, helpless. I had severe palpitation, shortness of breath, and sudden painful attacks that prostrated me. The only thing physicians did for me was to advise keeping quiet. In August last I commenced taking Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and be-fore I had finished the first bottle, I found the medicine was a God-send. I have now used four bottles in all and am feeling entirely well. I have not had an attack of the trouble for some months.

I am 73 years of age, and have held a grudge against patent medicines all my life, but I will not allow this feeling to prevent me from giving ry testimony to the great cure your valuable remedy has wrought in mo. I do this to show my appreciation of the great merits possessed by Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure. Very truly yours, SAMUEL O. STONE.

"Died of heart failure." How many obituary notices contain these significant words. The ravages of heart disease are confined to no locality. Its victims are particularly numerous among the most intellectual and finely organized. It is no respecter of age and its fatal ending comes very denly. Timely notice, however, is always given the person attacked, and i this notice is heeded, as it was in the case of Mr. Stone, and Dr. Miles Restorative Heart Cure is promptly taken, almost instant relief will be experienced and a complete cure generally results.

The Mexican Turkey and the Meleagris Ocellata-Turkey Breeding and Fattening-"Foundry Feeding" and Its Effect on the Flavor.

[Copyright, 1888, by the Author.] Those wise men termed ornithologists say there are only two separate and dis-tinct species of turkeys, though admitting the existence of many crosses and varia-tions caused by domestication. One of the two species allowed by the wise men is now commonest in Mexico, they say, though formerly found nearly everywhere in the temperate and in much of the trop ical part of North America. It is in turn divided into two varieties—the northern wild turkey, once common from Maine to Texas, and the Mexican turkey, supposed ly the progenitor of the common baruyard

The second species known to the orni-The second species known to the orni-thologists is the Meleagris occilata, mele-agris being the jaw breaking scientific name for turkey and occilata being added to show that birds of this species wear feathers adorned with glistening eye shap-ed spots, much like those that ornament the tail feathers of pencocks. This variety of turkey is found chiefly in Central Amer-ica and among the unlearned is known as the Honduras turkey. It is much smaller than the wild turkey of the States and shier, but not so clever. Lifelong turkey hunters, however, ig-nore the scientific classifications. They say there are four distinct races of turkeys in the United States. The first is clearly identical with the northern wild turkey, termed Meleagris gallapavo americana by the ornithologists, and the second is un-doubtedly the same as the Melcagris mexicana and is called the Rocky mountain i turkey by the hunters. They tall of a third variety, found only in Texas and northeastern Mexico, and a fourth, the Florida turkey, much smaller and handsomer than any of the others, which is found only in the poninsula that stretches Cubaward. The hunters seem to know nothing of the Honduras turkey, but it may be that it and the Florida bird are the

When the claims of Turkey and India and the Guinea coast were investigated, however, all fell to the ground, these of India collapsing first from the curious fact that the Hindoo name of the bird is "peru," pronounced exactly as the South American country whose spelling is the same. From this it would seem that the first turkeys to reach the old world might have been taken thither from South America, reaching Europe via India, Tur-key and Egypt, though this is only conjecture based on what might be termed the evidence of nomenclature.

As to the naming of the bird, wild tur-key hunters say it could by no means have been derived from the land of the sultan, but that it is clearly an imitation of the wild bird's call of "turk, turk, turk!"

Persons familiar with the wild turkey's flavor declare it much better than that of the farm grown bird and say the superiority is due to the pungent berries, spley nuts and aromatic seeds which form the diet of the former, yet the fact remains that the prices realized by certain standard turkey breeders are generally higher than can be obtained for the choicest wood bred birds. As a matter of frozen truth, however, a fat turkey is mighty good eat-ing wherever he is raised, and there are thousands of turkey gormands in the United States who care not a rap whether the Thanksgiving bird is eastern, western, southern or even Canadian, so long as it's turkey.

Canadian turkeys, by the way, are generally sold in the New York markets as Philadelphia birds. When I say Canadian furkeys, I refer only to the circumstance of birth, for such birds destined for markets in the United States are almost invariably fattened in Vermont, whither they are shipped chiefly from the province of Quebec.

The gathering of the turkeys is a ploturesque operation. Breeding turkeys for the "American market" is a great industry among the French "inhabitants." They rarely attend to the fattening of the birds, however, feeding them little or nothing at all after the feathers begin to form, but allowing them to run virtually wild and get their living the best way they can. By Sept. 1 they are ready for the buyers, invariably Yankees, each of whom has a route which he travels over every fall, taking all birds offered at such prices as can be agreed upon. It is the buyer's custom generally to begin on his route at the point farthest from the American boundary line. As the buyer collects his turkeys they are driven by boys in droves slong the roads toward "the States," some of which contain from 1,000 to 2,000 birds by the time the line is reached and ex-tend over half a mile of highway. Des Rivieres used to be a great point for rail-way shipment of turkeys to Vermont and bably still has that distinction. Though well grown and hardy, the turkeys ar mostly lean when unloaded from the cars in the Green Mountain State and of precisely the wrong type apparently to fur-nish good Thanksgiving eating. Vermont folk are "master hands" at feeding turkeys, however, and long before the great Thursday in November the hungry birds from Canada are transformed into perfect marvels of meleastideau toothsomeness. They raise and fatten turkeys differently in California, where, placed in charge of herders, in flocks of from 500 to 5,000, they range over hill and date during youth, accumulating a foundation of hardiness on which to superpose the need ed additions of fat. When the wheat and the barley and other grains have been bar-vested, the birds are turned in "on the stubble," where they soon round them-selves out on fallen grain which would otherwise be wasted.

Turkey raising and fattening are carried on in. Indiana, Illinois, Wiscon in and in
