

IT'S ALL TALK.

Yes, But It's Shenandoah Talk, the Kind That Tells in Shenandoah.

Talk that tells. Talk that's endorsed. Every day talk by people that know. City talk—kidney talk. Do kidneys talk? Well, yes, both loud and long. You should learn the kidney language. Backache in kidney talk means kidney trouble. Lame back means lame kidneys. Weak back means weak kidneys. A bad back is simply The kidney talking. Mrs. E. Williams, of 237 East Coal Street, says: "I have not used Doan's Kidney Pills myself, but my son, John, was greatly troubled with his back and kidneys. He had severe pains in his head too, mostly in the top and back and a constant aching pain in the loins. He did not rest well nights owing to a bladder trouble and he had much nervousness. A commercial man was at our house and he advised us to get Doan's Kidney Pills. He related what they had done for him and we were so impressed that we procured them at once from Kidlin's drug store. At that time my son was suffering from his back so intensely that he had him taken there. They did benefit him at once and so banished the whole trouble and annoyance. Now he is working in the mine every day and I have not heard him complain for over five months. We think there never was such an unflinching remedy as Doan's Kidney Pills."

TATTLING CLOTHING.

HOW A MAN'S GARB MAY PROCLAIM HIS RANK IN LIFE.

A Philosophical Tailor Tells How He Reads Character as Well as Vocation In The Man's Garments That Pass Before His Critical Eye.

"You may talk about getting knowledge of your fellow men through the art of phrenology or palmistry, about being able to read the people you meet by observing the lines about the mouth, the turn and form of the nose or the shape and the expression of the human eye, but I'll tell you," said Frank S. Flanagan, proprietor of the Pantorium, "there is nothing so clearly indicative of a man's character as the clothes he wears. We clean and press men for living here in this vocation in life. We learn it from his clothes. We know whether he is married or single, and if married how much his wife thinks of him; if single, whether he lives at home or is boarding. He is no mystery to us. We know whether he is a doctor, lawyer, newspaper man, gambler, priest, college professor, merchant, actor or what not. We can tell whether he is a bookworm, nervous or indifferent. If he likes children or is fond of them, his clothes bear that toll. In fact you never know a man until you clean him. When I got my hands on a man's suit of clothes, he is no longer unknown to me.

"You take the ministers. Of course they all wear a garb that is significant of their calling. The black of coat that they bring here to be fixed are always shining like a plate glass mirror. Their lapels are out of line from much pulling and hauling to improve their appearance. Their trousers shine, too, with a brilliancy that speaks of the ironing and the starching, with perhaps an extra polish obtained in putting down carpets or too frequent rubbing with the palms of the hands, smacking their legs in laughter while cracking jokes. They do not wear creases lengthwise in the folds of their trousers, but the creases circle around the legs. That's caused by holding the children on his lap. Pshaw! You can always tell a preacher's clothes.

"The lawyer's clothes are almost as easily distinguished as the preacher's. The seat of his trousers is always thin. You see, he generally sits on a wooden or cane bottom chair. This part of his trousers is only an adumbration. If the hole is worn completely through, he adopts one of two measures. He either wears a longer coat or has his pants 'half soled.' If he wears a longer coat to hide the laxity of his apparel, he is continually grabbing the bottom edge of it to keep the wind from disclosing his secret. If he has his trousers patched and continues to wear his sack coat, he looks ashamed and backs out of one's presence like a tumblebug. And then, too, the inside coat pocket of a lawyer is always full of papers. This makes the pocket sag, and it soon gets out of shape. The always of the lawyer's coats are always shiny. In studying he puts his head in his hands and rests his elbows on the table.

"I can tell a doctor too. His clothes, while generally clean and well preserved, have the smell of iodoforn about them. Then, too, he always leaves his clothes to be fixed at a certain hour. Other men call for their clothes about on time. Not so with the physician. He is always two or three hours late. He is very apt to leave a small vial of morphine tablets in his vest pocket.

"A most peculiar suit of clothes is worn by the pickpocket—yes, I have them for customers too. His pockets are as numerous as the political pig hunters. Pockets on the inside of pocket on the outside, under the waistband. Pockets everywhere. I never saw the like of places to conceal stolen articles. He might be searched a hundred times and still retain his 'swag.' I wish you could have seen a pair of pants I fixed up for one of those circus garters. That pair of pants just had exactly 42 pockets.

"Gamblers and liquor dealers have more neatness about their dress than any others. They dress in more ostentation than the men of other callings. The gambler generally leaves cards or poker chips in his pockets, and I have no trouble in finding him out.

"Take the grocery man, for instance. His clothes smell of almost everything from fish to the back of his trousers. They are more or less soiled from coming in contact with lard and other greasy substances. They wear an apron in front, which protects that part of the suit.

"It's funny to see the newspaper man's clothes. He don't have time for the use of a coat. There are two full moons in his pantaloons, and nary a patch is there. His trousers are fringed at the bottom, and he generally wears his pants turned up. He is fairly neat in appearance—he is, he keeps his clothes clean, because he seldom has more than one suit.

"The bow-legged man is a daisy. He likes his trousers creased in order that he may appear straight limbed. He sits tight in the saddle of his pants. His suspenders are short. The buttons on his trousers are not fastened. His vest is shorter than otherwise, but the point is knoer to the side of the crease gives him completely away. That may be the reason that women like bow-legged men, because they keep their pants pressed and creased.

"The college professor has neat clothes, but in them you will find fine particles of chalk dust, etc.

"Old Commodore Vanderbilt, whose beard was so long he could cut out of a church, gave in his 'Recollections' that when 10 years old he had a tutor who constantly imbeculated in him rectitude, purpose and energy.

"The tutor's praise of energy was expressed by the saying:

"There are three letters of more value than all the rest in the alphabet—namely, N R G."

Remarkable Rescue.

Mrs. Michael Curtin, Plainfield, Ill., makes the statement, that she caught cold, which settled on her lungs; she was treated for a month by her family physician, but grew worse. He told her she was a hopeless victim of consumption and that no medicine could cure her. Her druggist suggested Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption; she bought a bottle and to her delight found herself benefited from first dose. She continued after taking six bottles, found her self sound and well; now does her own housework, and is as well as she ever was. Free trial bottles of this Great Discovery at A. Wasley's Drug Store. Large bottles 50 cents and $1.00.

There is more Castor in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven, etc., that it is a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by P. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surface of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, P. J. RATS ABOARD SHIPS.

THREE FEROCIOUS SPECIES THAT TRAVEL BY SEA.

The Huge Norway Rat Gradually Driving the English and the Alexandrian Rodents Inland—Fierce Cannibalism Among the Savage Animals.

Nature originally intended that the brown rat should have one part of the earth for its habitation, the black rat another section and the white bellied rodent a third division. While these great nations overlapped each other a little, the boundaries were pretty arbitrarily fixed by the great oceans and other large bodies of water. A colony of powerful rats might swim across the straits and channels separating two islands and thus take possession of a new country for their descendants, but they could not hope to cross the Atlantic or Pacific and journey unaided from England to America or from this country to Australia.

So it was that the ships of men brought about the first great change in the distribution of rats. From the first the rats took to ships as ducks take to water. They found grain, provisions and water in the hulls of the old wooden ships of two centuries ago, and ever since then they have reared a race of hardy seamen that know the ways of the seas as well as any rats. They have been traveling back and forth to all parts of the earth for many centuries now, and they have created great changes in the rat population of the globe.

This country never had any typical rats until the black rat came here from Europe here on the ships of the early colonists. According to the best authorities, this rodent originally came from India, from which it has penetrated to every part of the habitable globe. Wherever ships go these black rats are found. In three centuries they have penetrated to every island and island of the tropical, temperate and arctic zones. They have become familiar objects on all ships that traverse the seas, and they are the wharf rats of every seaport. In temperate regions the English black rat has been introduced into tropical countries. It is often several inches longer. It is about seven or eight inches long, with a tail about one inch longer than its body.

For two centuries this English black rat held undisputed sway on the ships of the world's commercial navies, and they distributed themselves over the greater part of the world's surface. Then gradually there appeared upon the seas another rat, differing materially from the black rat. This alien creature had a black body with a white belly. Sometimes the body was a reddish gray, which made the creature look larger and fiercer than it really was. A trifle larger and stronger than the black rat, the white bellied or Alexandrian rat was more voracious and more ruthless destroyer. Then the fierce Alexandrian rats sailed away to unknown ports. It soon became evident that they liked warm countries, and they refused to land at any except a tropical port. Thus they have spread to most of the tropical countries, especially in South America and our southern states, leaving the colder countries for their black rivals.

But more recently a third race of rats has appeared upon the ships, and these rats are proving to be a more dangerous foe to the black and Alexandrian rodents. This brown or Norway rat is a native of China and the interior of Asia. It is a huge, ferocious creature, and wherever it goes it destroys all competitors and takes complete possession of the ships or wharfs in its native land. It is a large, powerful rodent, and upon the ships it attains even a larger size. Its length is from eight to nine inches, and its body is built on heavy lines. Neither the black nor Alexandrian rat is any match for it. So far this fierce brown rat has extended its dominion largely over cold countries, and it has come in contact chiefly with the English black rat. But in the warm countries where it has been artificially introduced it has quickly supplanted all rivals.

Today the black rats are not found in numbers on vessels sailing from any ports where the brown or Norway rats have become established. Gradually they are being forced inland by their more powerful enemies, and while we find the brown rats mostly on ships, along wharfs and in the sewers, the black rats are met with in houses under rafters and ceilings.

Ships leaving port for a long cruise extending over a period of a year or two have been known to come into port again with a cargo of rats so large that the seamen were unable to put them down. Others have been taken possession of by the rats and the sailors forced to abandon their vessel at sea. So voracious and ferocious are the big brown rats that they do not hesitate to attack the sailors when pinched for food. Consequently, while the sailors like to have rats on company on board the ship, they exercise precaution to limit their numbers. On sailing vessels that are out for a long cruise, the rats are kept killing days, when all the sailors join forces to destroy the too numerous rodents.

The rats not only prove dangerous to human life when allowed to multiply as will on shipboard, but they are a constant menace to the cargo of the vessel.

There is a relentless cannibalism practiced among the rats themselves, and this also helps to keep down their numbers. The largest rats do not hesitate to kill and devour the weaker ones. Thus if the English black rat were shipped aboard with the big brown rat the latter would soon kill the former and eat them. Similarly if a dozen brown rats were confined in a cage the stronger would soon devour the weaker and then fight savagely among themselves for supremacy. We find drifting about upon the seas of a disabled wreck, the sailors face a danger from the ship rats that grows more menacing as the days go by. If the ship becomes water-logged, the rats are forced to seek safety on the upper decks, and thus cut off from their food in the hold, they multiply and starve the sailors. They become bold and fiercer as the men grow weaker, and one day if relief does not come a fearful tragedy is enacted on the wreck.—New York Sun.

Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident of which Mr. John Oliver of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite, and continually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately a friend advised trying 'Electric Bitters,' and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they saved my life, and raised the grave of another life. No one should fail to try them. Only 50 cents per bottle at A. Wasley's drug store.

Why He Married.

In the north of England, where rabbit courting is much in vogue, swift well trained dogs often win large sums in prizes. It is therefore little to be wondered at that the owners of these animals should bestow so much attention upon them.

An old Yorkshire collier well known for his success in the courting field recently surprised all his admirers by marrying a very unimpressive young woman. He had always been reckoned a confirmed bachelor of the other sex.

"Why has he gone and got spoiled, lad, at thy age?" one of his friends asked him.

"Oh, that's not much of a tale," answered the old man gravely. "I agree with ye, but Betty yonder is no beauty—if she had been, I shouldn't have wed her. But there dog o' mine, he was simply blind for somebody to look after him while I was away at 'em. I couldn't bear to leave him in the house by himself, so I hit on the idea of marrying Betty. She's not handsome, but she's mighty good company for the dog!"—London Tit-Bits.

Tactless Men.

The late Mr. Parrnell was a rather tactless man. One night in the early eighties, says a writer in The Cornhill Magazine, when he and some of his followers were suspended for persistent obstruction in the house of commons, he went up to the distinguished strangers' gallery with a colleague to watch the subsequent course of events in the house. Nothing that he was very preoccupied and abstracted, his colleague said, "A penny for your thoughts, Mr. Parrnell." "Well," replied the Irish leader, "I was thinking how it had never struck me before that there are so many baldheaded members in the house."

General Grant was also a man of remarkably good nature. He used to pick his teeth in company without ever opening his lips. During his visit to this country he dined at Appleby House, the guest of the second duke of Wellington. A very distinguished company was present to meet him. He spoke in monosyllables only during the dinner, but when the ladies had retired he remarked aloud to his host, "My lord, I have heard that your father was a military man!"

These things have no place and no use for him. He is a man who has bilious turns and tired feelings and requires a sick man as well as all the chances in life to develop in a half-bushy.

These things are the self-dignity and wretchedness they involve if by merely low and vulgar means all any further, but you never know what is going to develop in a half-bushy.

There are hundreds of delicate temporary stimulants, "tonic extracts," sarsaparilla and compounds, which are more or less "boomed" by merely low and vulgar means. These subtle poisons which debilitate the entire organism and invite consumption and a host of other diseases will be driven out of the system and he will gain plenty of pure nourishing red blood, muscle-power and nerve-force. In short he will be a man among men.

MILK CRUST

When our baby was three months old, he had the milk crust very badly on his head, so that all the hair came out, and itched so much, he would not sleep at all. I got a box of CUTICULA SOAP and a box of CUTICULA OINTMENT. I applied the CUTICULA OINTMENT to his head, and before he had half a box it was entirely cured, and his hair commenced to grow out nicely. Feb. 24, '98. Mrs. H. T. JOHNSON, Ashland, Or.
