He denounced the proposition to annex the Philippines as subversive of every tradition dear to the American heart in the past, and the inauguration of w policy that would end in the downfall of the republic. He said the ratification of the treaty by the senate would sound the death knell of all the efforts of those who were trying to prevent the country from rushing on to suicide, and declared if he was a senashould be ratified. He denounced the president as the slavish follower of public opinion, but warned him that the tide would recede and the voice of started to do business in New York the people would in time rebuke him. Members stood in the aisles ten deep while he was speaking, but he tried to stop the applause, which continually broke out on the Democratic side. For almost two hours his words poured

When Mr. Johnson had finished Mr. Dolliver came to the defense of the administration. One of the ablest debaters, and perhaps the most eloquent of the house, his reply set the Repu licans wild with enthusiasm. He of scribed how the president had been fairly driven into the war by those who now sought to embarrass him before peace was definitely obtained, and his eulogy of the president patiently meeting all the perplexing problems which beset him as the great events of the last year moved on aroused his side and the galleries to cheers. These rang out again and again when he paid general's office. an eloquent tribute to Admiral Dewey and broke in renewed volume when he declared that the course of some memers at both ends of the capitol vas 'almost treason.'

But the highest pitch of excitement was reached when Mr. Johnson and Mr. Dolliver got to close quarters towards the end of the latter's speech. Johnson pressed the defender of the administration to disclose the president's ultimate purpose regarding the Philippines, but Mr. Dolliver for some time adroitly evaded a direct response.
At last he contended himself by declaring that this was not the point at issue; that the first thing was to end the war by ratifying this treaty. The future of the Philippines was a question gers and baggage, hotel accommodations at for the future. It was in every respect Old Point Comfort, Richmond, and Washing. a remarkable debate. The other speeches were completely overshadowed by those of Mr. Johnson and Mr.

There were two executive sessions, however, and in the first an agreement was reached to vote on the peace treaty on Feb. 6, at 3 p. m. At the second Senator Davis presented the American commissioners' reasons for the acceptance of the treaty in th form in which it was finally concluded. While he admitted that there had been some diversion of opinion among publicists in the United States as to the policy of including the Philippines in the agreement, there had been practically no other honorable way out of the difficulty. As for himself, Mr. Davis was willing from the start to ex-tend our borders so as to include these islands, because he believed their ac-quisition a most important stride in the advancement of the American nation, commercially and otherwise. He, with others, was looking forward to the prospective partition of the vast Chinese empire among the European nations, and he foresaw that if the United States did not secure a footing in the Orient such as they have an opportunity to secure they would be most effectually and forever shut out from the vast market.
