PECULIAR POISONS.

GENERATED IN THE HUMAN BODY.

The Result of Imperfect Digestion of Food.

Every living thing, plant or animal, contains within itself the germs of certain decay and death

In the human body these germs of death (called by scientists Ptomaines) are usually the result of imperfect digestion of food; the result of indigestion or dyspepsia.

The stomach, from abuse, weakens, does not promptly and thoroughly digest the food.

The result is a heavy, sodden mass which ferments (the first process of decay) poisoning the blood, making it thin, weak and lacking in red corpuscles: poisoning the brain, causing headaches, pain in the eyes.

Bad digestion weak on the heart, causing palpitation and finally bringing on disease of this very important organ.

Poor digestion poisons the kidneys, causing brights disease and diabetes

And this is so because every organ every nerve depends upon the stomach alone for nourishment and renewal, and weak digestion shows itself not only in loss of appetite and flesh, but in weak nerves and muddy complexion.

The great English scientist, Huxley, said the best start in life is a sound stomach. Weak stomachs fail to digest food properly, because they lack the proper quanity of digestive acids (lactic and hydrochloric) and peptogenic products: the most sensible remedy in all cases of indigestion, is to take after each meal one or two of Stuarts Dyspepsia Tablets, because they supply in a pleasant, harmless form all the elements that weak stomachs lack.

The regular use of Stuarts Dyspepsia Tablets will cure any form of stomach trouble except cancer of the stomach.

They increase flesh, insure pure blood, strong nerves, bright eye and clear complexion, because all these result only from wholesome food well digested.

Nearly all druggists sell Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at 50 cents full sized package or by mail by enclosing price to Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich., but ask your druggist first. A little book on stomach diseases mailed free. Address Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich.

BUSHY TAILS.

How Animals Who Wear Them Utilise Them In Winter.

"Some of our wild animals," said a naturalist, "carry about with them all summer that which nature has evidently intended as a substitute for their winter flannels. I mean their tails of course. So far as I have been able to judge the bushy tailed animals know no other use for their tails than as protection against the cold. Did you ever see a fox sleeping? That is one sight of which the most patient student of wild life cannot always boast, because a fox is always wide awake and has a general antipathy to being looked at. My own observations with sleeping ones have been confined to two that I raised from pups. When it was cold, they would shrink up and seem fairly to wrap their tails about them. When the air grew warmer, they would uncoil a little and sometimes discard the tail entirely, just about as impatiently as a sleeping child will kick off the covers when he gets too warm in the night. I do not think that this attitude is habitual with sleeping foxes. When the weather was warm, they did not curl up at all, but lay sprawling, with their tails on the ground behind them.

"The raccoon makes the same use of his tail. Did you ever see one preparing for a nap? Like the fox, he goes to sleep on his side, but he makes more fuss about it than a lazy lad getting up in the morning. First he hitches up his shoulders and arches his back, and in the cavity thus formed he carefully tucks away his knees and elbows and head. Then he brings his tail up close, the end of it curving over his head. He unwinds himself half a dozen times before he gets curled up to his satisfaction, and when finally arranged he resembles nothing quite so much as a muff without the customary openings. The squirrel also covers himself with his tail, sleeping upright and propped against something.

"In fact," concluded the naturalist, "this is true of every bushy tailed animal I have been on terms of sufficient intimacy to see asleep. It is a very kindly arrangement nature has made for their comfort, and they do not seem to mind very much carrying around their winter flannels in the summer. If they did not carry them with them wherever they went, they would probably lose them, as the red man proves in his tale of the bear and the rabbit."—New York Sun.

The Deadly Grip

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A Remarkable Cure.

Mr. Alexander Moore, a reliable business man, of 1230 S. 13th St., Philadelphia Pa., says: "I contracted a violent cold which settled all over me. The pain in my chest and side was excruciating. The doctor gave me medicine and blistered my side, but I only grew worse. Then you gave me a bottle of Brazilian Balm. I had little or no faith in it, but decided to try it. I took 3 or 4 good doses before bed time, and rubbed it well over my blistered side. That night I slept like a top—my first good rest for over a week—and awoke in the morning cured. Brazilian Balm is simply invaluable."

FISHING FOR SMELT.

HOW IT IS DONE IN THE WATERS OF OREGON STATE.

Times When Hooks and Lines Are Discarded For Shovels and Garden Rakes—The Sturgeon and Salmon of Columbia River.

Whatever claim the smelt of Atlantic waters may have on public appreciation, the smelt of the Columbia river and the west coast are very delicious. The smelt is the smallest marketable fish we have, but mountain trout abound in Oregon streams and are equal to any known.

Perhaps the largest of our eatable fish is the sturgeon, and Columbia river sturgeon are conceded to be much finer food than those caught on the rivers and shores of the east or waters of the Mississippi. So Oregon sturgeon are made use of in commerce as well as used fresh. It is natural to think of them as belonging near the ocean, as those of the Pacific are in great numbers found at the mouth of the Columbia, where they feed remorselessly on the luscious Chinook salmon, causing such damage that the cannery men are seriously considering the advisability of making war against them to save the salmon for their own use.

These sturgeon go hundreds of miles up the Columbia river and are found in its upper waters. They pass up the fearful rapids of the Cascades, which are 100 miles from Columbia river bar; then make the still more fearful way for 15 miles through the mad rush of the great and lesser dalles to reach the open water found for hundreds of miles above there. My own acquaintance with them extends only to about 200 miles from the ocean.

One of the greatest fish stories I ever heard relates to a visit made several years ago to Arlington, 50 miles above the dalles. Seeing something floundering about strong stakes driven in the broad river, I asked the cause, and a friend told me that some Arlington fishermen had caught a number of sturgeon weighing from 300 to 500 pounds apiece, had tied ropes in their gills and had each one "staked out," much as a cowboy would stake out his cayuse. I learned that they staked these creatures out to have them ready whenever the local market should be bare of fish or a sudden call come from abroad.

The Columbia river fisheries reach in value millions of dollars every year, and salmon canneries are all along the great river from the entrance to above the dalles. Salmon run up as far as to the sage plains of Idaho and came as a grateful relief to the emigrants who crossed the plains 50 years ago. I remember that one of the veterans among pioneers said to me that when his company was camped in the sandy shores of Snake river they were much afraid of hostile savages. One night they heard a terrible floundering in the river close by and stood guard all night to ward off harm, but when morning came they discovered that this noise was caused by salmon that came in great schools and were trying to get over a riffle in the river.

The finest smelt are found in the Columbia. They are as delicate and dainty as fastidious tongue can desire or pampered palate wish. And they come up the river when fish are mostly desired and least provided. They first come in numbers few and scattered, but with excellence beyond reproach. The pioneers of the movement are caught with all the pains necessary and taken to Portland to be served to club epicures and gormands who are able to pay a fabulous price for the first of the season. Nothing can be finer; not even flecked trout, fresh from the purling brook, are more estimable, toothsome or popular.

The common people read the items in The Oregonian, and with tears in their voices talk of the fact that plutocrats and monopolists and bon viveurs are eating smelt at 75 cents per pound, but solace themselves with the consoling certainty that soon smelt will be plenty for all the world, and that they will eat their full share. In a few days smelt come up the river in quantity and down in price until they are piled in pyramids on the fish tables in front of fishmongers' establishments, when everybody's wife will stop to order them for home use.

There have been times when the contemplative angler—who has read Izaak Walton and heard of Daniel Webster as his disciple—has been sitting on a log at the mouth of the Cowlitz or some smaller stream tributary to the great Columbia and while lost in thought has been alarmed to find the placid waters where his line had been idly swaying as he had been watching and waiting, disturbed by such swarms of hustling and swimming things that he came near falling off his log in serious misapprehension of what was happening. He could not catch the glancing lights and shadows with his hook and line, for they were too busy to stop and too eager to get somewhere to bite. The only thing he could do was to gather them in and scoop them up with both hands and pour them into the opening of his fish basket, and when, in a moment or so, the basket was full look blankly about for something to hold the hurrying prey.

Not far away would be the cabin of some settler. There he went in haste, announced the coming of the first run of smelt, when all turned loose, rolled barrels, kegs, tubs or dry goods boxes to the river's edge; then taking garden rakes and shovels—anything and everything that had a propensity to scoop and catch and hold—the entire family—"dad," "mam" and the boys, girls and hired man—went to work manfully to scramble for and rake in these wanderers from the briny deep who had come again in this earliest month to revisit the glimpses of the silver streams where they had been spawned and first known the golden day. Then there were great rushing to and fro, great effort and prodigious performance, as tons and wagon loads of smelt were made game of and the net proceeds hurried to Portland to find a market.

This is but a faint picture of smelt flashing on the broad Columbia. Then word is telegraphed, and all dwellers of the Willamette and everywhere else are promised smelt without end—as long as they last—and all are cautioned to save their appetites for the time when the smelt shall arrive.—Portland (Or.) Cor. New York Times.

OLD BOOKS.

Their Contents Rather Than Their Dates Make Them Valuable.

"It is extraordinary," said a book collector the other day, "the value some people attach to old books simply because they are old. Not long ago a friend of mine showed me two old trunks filled with books which he had found in a house originally the property of his wife's grandfather, and which she had recently inherited from her mother. There were in all perhaps about 300 volumes, most of which bore the dates 1760, 1770, 1785 and so on, and my friend confidently believed that they were worth at least their weight in gold. On the contrary, they were books of very little value and interest, and not worth much more than their weight as waste paper. He politely suggested that I was a liar when I told him that, but he changed his mind after he had tried in vain to sell the books to secondhand dealers.

"Outside of these overestimated books my friend's wife had a barrelful of pamphlets which she was going to use to kindle the fire with. Though worthless in my friend's opinion, these had really considerable value, being old Massachusetts, Philadelphia and New York almanacs, Revolutionary pamphlets and broadsides and printed documents relating to Kings and Queens counties, and a dealer paid my friend $100 for the lot. One of the despised almanacs was Charles Smith's 'Gentleman's Pocket Almanac' for the year 1796, which contained a portrait of Washington — one of the rarest of the Washington portraits—and yet my friend was going to kindle the fire with it.

"It is really next to impossible to get such people to believe that a book is not of necessity worth money because it was printed a long time ago. Nine out of ten books published before this century are growing more worthless every year. The tenth one has value, higher or lower, in proportion to its character. Occasionally a literary gem, a book of real value to a collector, may be found in a lumber room, but the date on the title page is never a safe guide."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Dr. Pierce's FAVORITE Prescription

J. S. Carlisle, Esq., of Manchester, Tenn., writes: "I have been prescribing your medicines for the last eighteen years in the Coffee County Poorhouse and Asylum. Your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Pleasant Pellets' are the best medicines for the diseases for which they are recommended, that I ever used. They saved my wife's life at the time of 'change of life'. I also cured the worst case of lunacy that we ever had with your 'Favorite Prescription'. The case had been under the doctor's care for three years. I gave your medicine and the patient became well. This was nine years ago, and she is still in good health. I have been recommending your medicines to many. I have told our druggist that if the people came back and said Dr Pierce's medicines did not give satisfaction, to give them back their money and charge it to me. I have not once been called upon to refund. I think I have guaranteed seventy-five or one hundred cases."

ECZEMA ON BABY

My little six-months old girl had Eczema. We tried all kinds of remedies, but she kept getting worse. I used to wrap her hands up, and to dress her, had to put her on the table. I could not hold her, she would kick and scream, and, when she could, she would tear her face and arms almost to pieces. Four boxes of CUTICURA (ointment), two cakes of CUTICURA SOAP, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT cured her, and no trouble are left. Feb. 7, '98. Mrs. G. A. CONRAD, Lisbon, N. H.
