THE GOOD TIME COMING.

'In his "Queen Mah" Shelly predicts a time wherein age shall be athletic and its brow fair and smooth. Men shall be active and women beautiful up to ninety or a hundred years. There shall be no languor or disease, no gray deformity; only the slow necessity of death.

"It should be part of our municipal and national policy," says a recent report of the Register-General of England, to "prolong the lives of the people. Untimely death, preceded by much pain and lingering illness, is a great evil, and our posts sing that in the happier ages of the world this source of tears will be dried up. Especially ought we tog guard and promote the health and comfort of our women, upon whom the character of the generations to come so largely depends."

Heaven grant that the poets may be right, but it can only be brough to pass by means of agencies and methods which express God's laws in nature and in life. Take an illustration :-

"It is with deep gratitude," says a lady, "that I inform you of my complete recovery from the complaint of the bladder and kidneys, with which I was so long afflicted. Immediately after the birth of my baby I was a great sufferer. The best physicians pronounced my ailment to be organic disease of the womb, and ordered me to the hospital to an, dergo an operation. Having been two weeks in the hospital the day was fixed, but I refused to submit, feeling that my trouble was of the bladder and kidneys and not of the womb.

"I then returned home-my sufferings continuing. A little later I declined further medical treatment and resigned to the worst that might befall me. One day my boy came in with a pamphlet describing Waruer's Safe Cure and the cures it had wrought in cases like mine. I wrote you for a question blank and sent a sample of my kidney secretion. You declared my complaint to be what I had already supposed. I began taking Warner's Safe Cure at once, and after using three bottles I found myself entirely cured. That was several months ago, and I have not had one of my symptoms since. I have moved on our farm in the country and am now able to do a man's work. I most gladly and heartily commend your remedies to all—particularly those of my own sex—who are victims, not merely of kidney and bladder troubles, but of any of the allments and weakness so common among women. (Signed) Mrs Ross L. Worty, Rieley, N. J.

women. (Signed) Mrs. Rosa L. Worby, Risley, N. J.

For disease of the urinary system and generative organs, weak back, pain in the sides, headache, anemia, palled complexion, nervous prestration, low spirits, and all those disorders coming under the head of "female complaints" the preparations of the Company have for many years been brilliantly successful. Let us despondent and distressed women abandon hope until they have failed to help her—and that they will never do. These remedies are working for that better time of which poets sing.
