The Bond Sale.

The county bond issue remains in a doubtful condition, and the court will again likely be called upon to dispose of the question. H. H. Pearson, the Philadelphia broker, has informed the County Commissioners that the blank bonds for the $175,000 loan voted by him will be in Pottsville on Saturday ready for the county officials' signatures. He also says he will be prepared at that time to pay the money over to the county on the receipt of the bonds. The rate of interest to be paid is 3 1/2 per cent., with a premium of $4.00 per hundred. It will be remembered that the County Controller was present and sanctioned the agreement with Pearson, but since then the Controller has withdrawn his approval and refuses to sign the bonds. Notwithstanding their desire to close the matter up and relieve the county of paying six per cent. interest, as now, the County Commissioners will not proceed further without the cooperation and approval of the Controller. In that event Pearson's counsel will likely apply for an injunction or sue to recover damages.

CELEBRATE DEWEY DAY.

A Splendid Souvenir of the Event Placed Within the Reach of All.

May 1 is the first Dewey Day. The Governor of Pennsylvania has issued a proclamation asking for its observance. Other States will likewise remember the occasion. Next Sunday's Philadelphia Press (April 30) will be a magnificent Dewey Day souvenir number. The frontispiece will be a reproduction in colors of a painting of Dewey on the flagship Olympia, which will show the famous Admiral as he is today. This splendid picture alone will be worth more than any other souvenir you can secure. It is beautifully printed, in delicate colors, and will satisfy any hero worshiper in the country. But this is not all. Four splendid pages in color and photographic halftones will bear upon the work of the Admiral. The work of Dewey's fleet will be portrayed by the finest copyrighted photographs. The work of the army a year after will be illustrated in the same way, and a page showing Dewey, as the comic artist sees him, in a very enjoyable part of this great edition. There will be side lights on the career of Dewey telling incidents in his life, which will be eagerly read by all; something about Admiral Dewey's nephew, who is navigator on board the Battleship and many other striking features appropriate to Dewey Day.

The third of the series on "Men who are prominent in city and state" will be a readable sketch on D. T. Watson, Pittsburgh's famous lawyer, who figured so conspicuously in the Quay trial. It will be illustrated by a fine sketch made from life.

Be sure to order next Sunday's Press to-day.

THE LABOR EXODUS.

The Hope for the Future is a Depletion of the Population.

From several directions—Shamokita, Mt. Carmel, Hazleton—comes the news of an exodus of the foreign element which is creating an apparent scarcity of mine labor. There can, of course, be no real scarcity of mine labor while the men of the mines are working less than half time, and this reported exodus may be that natural means of bringing about a new adjustment of supply and demand in the anthracite coal field, which will finally make it possible to earn a fair living in and about the mines.

It is difficult to see how a proper regulation of the supply and demand can be brought about by any other process. The opportunity to market anthracite coal has been curtailed in recent years, though the total output of last year is encouraging in the fact that the decline appears to have been halted, and it may be possible, with all the adverse conditions, that the annual output may suffer no further decline. The problem, then, from the labor standpoint, is to be solved only by a decrease in the number of mine workers in this field, the possible closing down for a period of a number of the collieries, and thus a greater amount of work to be done by those remaining in the industry.

The whole tendency of the recent trend in methods about the mines has been to cheapen the cost of production. The giving out of work by contract, which heretofore was done by day labor, has been put in force to a greater extent than heretofore, with the result of lessened earnings to the mine workers, as a whole. Air compressor haulage, and other recent improvements, have been along the same line.

One feature, however, about the exodus from the coal mines which is to be deplored, is the departure of many young men for the larger cities. This depopulation, if long continued, will change entirely the character of the mine population of the next generation. The only hope for the future of the region then is a depletion of the population which has drifted in from Southern Europe in the last few years, so that the remuneration for mine labor may become a little more satisfactory for the native population.—Mahanoy City Record.
