From Muschief. The police were kept busy Saturday and had night tracing two former jail birds whose actions indicated that they had evil designs in view. The two men were Peter Lutwin. of town, and Joe Pickuloski, alias Joe Smith, et Wm. Penn: Lutwin is the man who was rejected at the regular army recruiting a stion at Pottsville last week, on account of his criminal record.

During the hours of Saturday night, and until four o'clock yesterday morning, the crooks flitted from one part of the town to another, dedging into streets and alleys with such irregularity that the police frequent y lost trace of them, and finally lost them al-

Last night the two men again made their appearance and the palice kept them under constant surveillance, with the hope that they would eventually be caught in the act of trying to rob some place, and thus lay the makers open to a term in jail. At midnight the two men bade such other good night and Pickaloski started Sappealogs Throughout the Country a the direction of Wm. Pena. The was but a scheme to deceive the police. Some time after Pollenman Foyle hurried to West Apple alley upon hearing prolonged barking of dogs. His trip was a fruitless one and he failed to discover any trace of an attempted robbery, or locate any suspicious characters.
He walked up town and was told that Lutwin and Pickaloski were on East Coal street. He hurried in that direction, but falled to find the men. Later he found they had been on Bowers street. The two crooks kept on the move and led the police a chase until about two o'clock yesterday morning, when Officers Foyle and Mullahy took them into custody at the Lehigh Valley Rallrand crossing at Main street. The men made the plea that they were waiting for an east-bound freight train, intending to go to Allentown, where the Odd Fellows' convention meets this week. The police placed no faith in the story, in view of the events of the preceeding hours, and placed the two men under arrest as suspicious characters. They are now serving five days each in the lockup. When Lutwin was searched the officers found on his person an iron bolt twelve inches long, and an excellent instrument for forcing doors and windows. Nothing was found on Pickaloski,
