The Kidney Complexion.

The pale, sallow, sunken-checked, dis ressed looking people you so often meet are afflicted with "Kidney Complexion." Their kidneys are turning to a parsnip

BENT GLASS. More Used Now Than Ever-How It Is Formed Into Shape:

Bent glass was at one time more commonly used for showonse fronts than for anything else, but it has come to be em ployed for a variety of purposes and it is now used far more extensively than ever before. Its use in store fronts is becoming perfore. Its use in store frants is becoming more and more familiar, very large plates being boint for this purpose. It is now used more than ever before in the construction of buildings for dwelling purposes. In windows on rounded corners and in tow-ers, it is used in coach fronts; it is used in the rounded front china closets and in making glass cabinets. Either plain or bevoled giass may be bent, and to any For one use and another glass in many sizes is now bent in many forms. The number of molds required for current se in a glass bending establishment is large, and the accumulated molds number thousands. Glass is bent in a kiln. Glass melts at 9,800 degrees. The heat employed in bending is 1.800 degrees. No pyrometer would stand long in that heat. It might last an hour, but it would not last a day, and so the heat of the kiln is judged from the color of the flame and other indications. By long experience and observation the expert glass bender is enabled to estimate the heat in this manner with accuracy. Smaller pieces of glass are put into the nolds in the kilns with forks unde for the purpose. The great molds used for bend-ing large sheets of glass are mounted an ears, so that they can be rolled in and out of the kilns. The glass is laid upon the top of the mold over the cavity and it is bent by its own weight. As it is softened by the heat it sinks into the mold and so is bent into forms. It may take an hour or two to bend the glass, which is then left in the kiln from 24 to 36 hours to anneal and cool. Glass to be bent, of whatever kind or size it may be, is put into the kilns in its finished state. The great heat to which it is subjected does not disturb the polished surface. Despite the exercise of every precaution more or less glass is broken in bending it. Bent glass cost about 50 per cent more than the fint --- New York

Death Reveals a Romance.

The recent death of Thomas J. Haveineyer, brother of Henry O. Havemeyer, president of the Sugar Trust, has brought to light a new romance in the wealthy but unhappy Havemever family.

Thomas J. Havemeyer was regarded as a confirmed bachelor. He had an immense estate; bachelor's apartments in New York city, and, as it now appears, still another establishment where he lived for five years Sarsaparilla. with a secretly wedded wife. In straight lines; it comes, as it were, in a sigzag manner, dancing from side to says, died five weeks ago at his bachelor apartments in East Nineteenth street.

For fifteen years Mrs. Havemeyer, as she must now be called, has kept her union a secret from all except her immediate family. This, she save, she has done because she so loved and trusted the man who had given her everything but the recognition of the world as his wife. They had been lovers from childhood, when the lovers from ohildhood, when the Havemeyer and the Wright children, all living near Union Square, used to play with one another. The state-ment continues: lovers from childhood, when the ment continues

"Finally, on the 8th of September, 1884. Thomas J. Havemeyer, succeeded in indusing Anna Wright secretly to become his wife. It was also understood, for the reasons that the young man urged, that the union should not be made public until objections of elder members of the family were removed."

Mrs. Havemeyer, says : "I have no desire for publicity of any sort. It seems impossible to me that my husband has not made some provision for me. Had he done so I should perhaps have been content to remain still unknown to the world as his wife But seeing that his relatives declare he has died intestate, I have yielded to the earnest persuasions of my friends and demanded my rights.

The Scientific Explanation of Something We See Every Day.

It is very curious, said the old professor of physics, to see how many market gar-deners there are who raise things under glass, make money out of the process and yet do not know why their heating frames and their hothouses remain hot inside.

Now, as a matter of fact, the heat mechanism of a hothouse depends on a well known proposition in physics. I suppose you are acquainted with the fact that side as it comes along. If these waves are very short, light is the result; if they are a trifle longer, they take the form of heat. If the light waves strike anything on the way down, they are very apt to be made longer, or rather they are apt to be turned into heat. Now, the waves which form light are so short that they will readily pass through glass, but the waves which form heat are so long that they will which form and not pass through. From this, therefore, you may see why a hothouse remains hot. The energy from the sun passes into the house through the glass roof in the form of light. Then it strikes the objects in the house and is turned to heat. But this heat cannot pass out through

So the light keeps coming in, and the heat keeps accumulating, and soon the hot-houses become very warm indeed, even on the coldest days in winter. Of course our dwelling houses are heated by the sun in the same way. The light somes in through the windows, but the
