A POLICEMAN MURDERED

While Hunting a Fugitive Maryland Murderer in Washington.

CROWD PREVENTED A LYNCHING.

The Murderer Took Refuge in the Loft of a House, and Surrendered Only When Preparations Were Making to Set Fire to the Building.

Washington, May 18.—Humphrey Taylor, a negro suspected of the Rosenstein murder at Silldell, Md., yesterday shot and killed Police Sergeant Fritz Passau, wounded Policeman Gow and kept a posse of over a dozen officers at bay from the loft of a house for nearly two hours. Dozens of shots were exchanged between the officers and the fugitive, who only surrendered when preparations were made to burn the premises.

Last Saturday morning Louis Rosenstein and his wife, who kept a small store at Silldell, were found senseless and horribly wounded in their storehouse. Rosenstein soon died from his injuries and the woman is believed to be near death. Suspicion fell upon a negro named Humphrey Taylor, alias Brown, who was noted as a possessor of this city were notified and a strict watch was kept for the man. A negro answering the description of Taylor was seen last Saturday evening and information received by the police led them to believe their man was living in a small house on Fowler's Hill, a settlement about a quarter of a mile west of Georgetown.

Yesterday Taylor was seen to enter the place, and word was immediately sent to the nearest precinct station and a posse of officers hurried to the house, while Passau, Gow and another officer attempted to gain entrance through the front door. Repeated knockings and calls failed to elicit a response, and finally the door was forced. The two small rooms on the first floor were empty, and the officers ascended to the second story. The front room was also untenanted, and as the men passed into the rear apartment Taylor opened fire from the trap door of a eck loft, in which he had taken refuge. Sergeant Passau sank to the floor dead with two bullets in his chest. His companions rushed forward, and Policeman Gow opened fire through the trap door, but failed to hit the fugitive. Taylor, however, retreated to a corner of the loft, and realizing his advantage the officers picked up the body of the Sergeant and retreated. Gow received a bullet in his right hand, badly shattering it, and another struck his metal badge and glanced downward the entire length of his coat.

The reserve of two precincts were called out and the house surrounded. Meantime word of the attack and the shooting had attracted several thousand persons. Occasionally the negro would fire a shot at the officers and immediately a volley would answer it, but no one was hurt. With revolvers in hand they watched every window and tried several times to draw Taylor from the house. He was successful, for he seemed to have an unlimited supply of ammunition. Finally, concluding that he would not surrender, Chief of Police Sylvester and District Commissioner Wright were communicated with, and the latter, after consulting legal advice, directed the police to fire the premises. At midnight was secured, saturated with oil, and the officers began to remove the furniture. Seeing his game was hopeless Taylor surrendered.

Surrounded by officers with drawn revolvers he was hustled out of the house to the patrol wagon, when the crowd surged forward, with shouts of "lynch him," "burn him," and made a rush for the prisoner. A rope was secured and the mob made a desperate effort to place it about the neck of the wretch. The coolness of the officers, however, prevented Taylor from being rather badly disfigured by blows from the nearest of the crowd. All the way to the station house the mob followed the wagon, shouting for vengeance, and lingered about the building when he was safely in a cell.

When questioned by the police in regard to the Rosenstein murder the prisoner became much confused in his replies and told a half dozen different stories. He said that a man named Brown had committed the murder and that he waited on the outside and kept watch, receiving from Brown $50.

Upon searching the premises the police found $182 and a gold watch and chain where he had secreted them. He had a diamond ring and a small sum of money on his person. His conflicting stories as to his movements and where he obtained the money led the police to believe he is the man the Maryland authorities are looking for. It is probable, however, that he will be detained by the district authorities and tried for the murder of Sergeant Passau.

THE PEACE CONFERENCE.

Commissioners Will Be Named to Arrange Programs for Discussion.

The Hague, May 18.—The city is brilliantly decorated with foreign flags, denoting the various national headquarters of the delegates to the disarmament conference. Last evening M. Van Karneboek, former Dutch minister of foreign affairs, gave a dinner to introduce the foreign delegates. The reporters will be admitted only to hear the inaugural address of M. De Beaufort, who presided over the opening of the discussion of the czar's project. Three commissions will then be named to arrange programs for discussion. The first relates to restrictions of armaments and military expenditures. The second deals with the laws governing the carrying of arms, and the third with mediation and arbitration. A great mass of diplomatic documents will be submitted on these subjects.

M. De Staal will open the conference by summarizing the objects of the meeting and expressing the confidence of Emperor Nicholas that the powers will support the beneficent work of the conference. After the appointment of the commissions the conference will adjourn for a week.

The American delegates, it is understood, will carefully abstain from mixing in purely European questions but will take an earnest part in the discussion of the application of arbitration and improvements in the Geneva rules for the protection of field hospitals.

THE BUFFALO STRIKERS.

Latest Indications Seem to Guarantee Final Settlement.

Buffalo, May 18.—Bishop Quigley took a determined stand in his efforts to bring the strike of the grain shovelers and sympathetic organizations to an end last night, and as a result the outlook for a cessation of the trouble is somewhat brighter.

Early in the evening the bishop addressed a very large meeting of striking freight handlers in East Buffalo. He asked them to appoint a committee with power to act, which will confer with the lake line managers today, and assured them that an agreement abolishing the saloon payment system and the Sunday work, as well as other abuses, would be signed in short order. The strikers adopted the bishop's suggestion unanimously, and appointed the committee. The bishop thanked the men, told them that he would look after their interests and said he felt confident that they would be back at work by Friday.

The bishop then drove to South Buffalo, where the striking grain shovelers were holding a meeting. In a few words Bishop Quigley informed them of what the handlers had agreed to do. He then asked them to vote on certain amendments to the agreement decided upon by Contractor Conners and the grain shovelers' executive committee. Fully 95 per cent voted "aye."

A new turn was given to the strike situation when the members of the Marine Firemen's Benevolent association voted unanimously to quit work at noon today unless the scopers' strike is definitely settled by that time.
