The behavior of wild estriches on the lains of South America and South Africa is said to be often exceedingly droll. They have been seen to perform an antic that looks like waltzing. A number of them will start off on a run, and, having gone a considerable distance, they stop sudden-ly, spread their wings and whirl round and round until they fall down. They also kneel to each other when about to light, opening their wings and swaying their bodies about in an excited way.

Watered Milk. Here is a good test for watered milk which is simplicity in itself: A well polished knitting needle is dipped into a deep vessel of milk and immediately withdrawn in an upright position. If the milk is pure, some of the fluid will hang to the needle, but if water has been added to the milk, even to a small proportion, the fluid will not adhere.

New Jersey's House of Lords. It will come as a surprise, says. The Genealogical Magazine, perhaps even as a shock, to most people to learn that there is a real house of lords in the United States. It is situated in the state of New Jersey, and its members, although citizens of the United States, are, at the same time, vassals of her majesty. Charles II gave to his brother James the land which is now New Jersey, and James in his turn gave the land to 12 of his friends, with a deed of grant creating them and their de scendants lords.

The lords meet twice every year in Perth Amboy, in a little two roomed house creet-ed on the site of the first meeting house, which was creeted in 1686. They are summoned by a crier with bell, dressed after the manner of a beefeater. His summons begins with the usual "Hear ye, hear ye, hear ye—all manner of men to whom these presents do come—that in pursuance of his majesty King Charles," etc. The lords, who have been waiting in the outer room then proceed to the inner or council cham ber, where their deliberations are presided over by the lord president.
