happenings Throughout the Country
Chronicle for Hasty Perusal.

The "struggling boy" is the latest. The work of tearing out the machinery at Gordon plane has been resumed. Steadier work at the mines is having its effect in local business circles. Richard Dowling was committed to jail by Squire Morris, of Port Carbon, on the charge of assault and battery and attempt to kill, preferred by his wife. Secretary of the Commonwealth Grist has decided that he cannot legally advertise the constitutional amendments passed by the last Legislature, but which were vetoed by Governor Stone. The Potomac electric railway employees will hold a picnic next Saturday. The thorough Council meets to-morrow evening. John DeLong, Jr., requests the statement that he was not one of the parties charged with stealing books from Abe Levine. The charge was against John DeLong, Sr. The Potomac telegraph office will be open day and night hereafter, never closing. The latest entomological wonder is a bicycle bug, and is quite as belligerent as the kissing assant. The M. E. Stanley school of Gilberton will picnic at Lakeside next Saturday. Two engineering students made the journey from Philadelphia to Tanques on foot to inspect coal mines. Bernard McKever, of Pottsville, and Miss Maggie Delaney, of Lanthier, were married yesterday afternoon. Charles Price and Miss Clara Cook, both of Mahanoy City, were joined in wedlock. The County Treasurer has received the pamphlet laws, and subscribers can receive copies of the same. United Brethren churches of the Cumberland Valley held their annual reunion yesterday at Mont Alto, Franklin county. While fishing in the Juniata river "Boney" Keiner was pulled overboard from his boat by a big carp, which was hooked on his line, and he narrowly escaped drowning. In a fight at Dupont, Luzerne county, Dennis Ferr fatally stabbed Bruno Vassella. Frank Cheek was killed by falling coal in the Green Ridge colliery, Northumberland county. Major General Nelson A. Miles has been elected a member of the Pittsburg Union Veteran Legion. Young Joseph Roemig is dying at Ansville from lockjaw, the result of a Fourth of July wound in the hand. Coal is being shipped in large quantities from the Dubois region, in which the strikers have just gone back to work.

A Curious Old Ad.

A Boston paper has unearthed this curious old advertisement from the Boston Post Boy and Advertiser for March 16, 1767: "The Bell-Crier will go through Boston, before the end of next March, to Collect Rags for the Paper Mills at Milton, when all People that will encourage the Paper Manufacture may dispose of them; the best Price will be given. They are taken in at Mr. Caleb Davis's Shop, at the Fortification; Mr. Andrew Gillespie's, near Dr. Clark's; Mr. Andrew Hurdale's, near Phillips's Wharf; and Mr. John Boies's in Long Lane; Mr. Frothingham's in Charleston; Mr. Williams's in Marlborough; Mr. Ellison's in Salem; Mr. John Harris's in Newbury; Mr. Daniel Fowler's in Portsmouth; and at the Paper Mill in Milton.

"Rags are as Beauties, which concealed hid; but when in Paper, how it charms the Eye; Frag may Rags, new Beauties to discover; For Paper truly, every one is a Lover; By it's Pen and Press such Knowledge is displayed, As wouldn't exist if Paper was not made; Wisdom of Things, mysterious Divines, Illustrations doth on Paper shine."

Largest Breaker in the World.

The largest coal breaker in the world will soon be among Carbonade's industries, the mammoth one now in course of construction on the "date" taking the place of the several smaller ones now operated in that vicinity by the Delaware & Hudson company. Four thousand tons daily will be the coal breaking and preparing capacity of the great plant.

THE WEATHER.

The area of high pressure has moved from Iowa to Missouri, diminishing rapidly in magnitude. A storm applied to the westward, sweeping in the east gulf and a trough of low pressure extends from Arizona to Assiniboia. Forecast for to-day and tomorrow in this section: Fair; light westerly winds, becoming variable.

Sunrise, 4:55; sunset, 7:30; length of day, 14h., 35m.; moon rises, 4:49 p. m.; moon sets, 1:01 a. m.

AT LAST.

When on my day of life the night is falling
And, in the wind from unimagined spaces blown,
I hear the voices out of darkness calling
My feet to paths unknown.

Thou who hast made my home of life so pleasant,
Leave not its tenet when its walls decay,
O Love divine, O Helper ever present,
Be thou my strength and stay!

Be near me when all else is from me drifting—
Earth, thy home's pictures, days of shade
and shine,
And kindly face to my own uplifting
The love which answers mine.

I have but thee, O Father! Let thy Spirit
Be with me thus to comfort and uphold.
No more I seek the comfort of palm, I seek,
No street of shining gold.

Be with me if my good and ill unreckoned,
And both forgiven through thy unending
grace,
I and myself by hands familiar beckoned
Unto my fitting place—

Some humble door among thy many mansions,
Some sheltering shade where sin and striving cease,
And flows forever through heaven's own expansions
The river of thy peace.

There from the music round about me stealing
I faint would learn the new and holy song
And find at last beneath thy trees of healing
The life for which I long.
—John Greenleaf Whittier.

HABITS OF THE HORSE.

Fear of Wolves, Speed of Colts and Habit of Shying.

Another animal which, when in a state of nature, lives in droves is the horse. It is almost as defenseless as the sheep, and when a herd of wild horses is attacked by wolves there is no escape but in flight. In its wild state the horse's natural habitat is on the open plains, not in mountainous regions, as on the steppes of Asia, where it was attacked by wolves only in safety in its superior speed. If the young foal were not as swift as its parents, it would fall an easy prey to the pursuer, and so, within a few generations, the wild horse might be utterly destroyed by its enemies. The curious thing is that the foal is quite as swift as its parents. When one looks at it, even in its domesticated condition, it seems to be all legs, and one is surprised to see how easily the slight body is borne along on those long legs beside the mother, even when she is running at her swiftest rate. In that fact lies the safety of the wild horse from destruction, and the thousands of generations in which that useful animal has been domesticated have brought no change in the peculiar conformation of the foal's limbs, though it is no longer needed for its original purpose.

Another curious thing is that one of the faults of the horse of which we are apt to complain is the habit of shying; it is a survival of an old habit which was useful and necessary when its ancestors were still roaming wild upon the plains. Then every horse was constantly on the outlook for an enemy, and it did not look only with one eye, but habitually kept turning its ear in all directions, so as to catch the slightest sound which should indicate the presence of danger. Not only when a wolf was seen did the herd take flight, any sound, as of the wolf breaking through the long grass, caused an instantaneous stampede, and something of that habit still survives. The horse seldom fears the objects which it sees unless they appear suddenly, but the sudden appearance of some light thing drenches by the winter or some slight sound that perhaps may not be heard by his master may cause an instant and involuntary shy, such as the poor brute would instinctively make if he were still wild upon the plains. How unjust it is and how utterly needless to justify his terror by whipping him for such a fault! To do so is to make him only so much the readier to shy again, remembering—and he is sure to remember—that, even if there has been no reason for his involuntary shying, there is something to dread immediately afterwards. The only sensible way to deal with this remnant of wildness in the domesticated horse is to stop and let him feel that there is nothing to fear and so break down the remnant of his old and perfectly natural habit of fright from possible danger.—Our Animal Friends.

JUSTICE IN ETHIOPIA.

THE SORcery BY WHICH AN ASSASSIN WAS TRACKED.

His Trial Before King Menelik's Criminal Court—The Abyssinian Method of Procedure—The Sentence and the Execution.

In order to get clues in difficult cases the Abyssinians resort to extraordinary methods. In detecting criminals they employ a young boy, whom they put into a certain condition of somnambulism. They call him the Hebacha.

The Hebacha is made to sleep at the scene of the crime. Early in the morning the scene begins. During the night he is supposed to have been conversing with the criminal in the astral atmosphere. Consequently he has a clue which he follows as one might follow footsteps upon the sand. But before he starts out he must drink, fasting, the "magic draft." This beverage is the middle-aged man composed of vegetable and animal ingredients. It is said that at daybreak they add three drops of the blood of a male child.

When the Hebacha has taken this strange morning cocktail, he becomes excited and nervous. At his left was the French colony, at his right, seated on steps covered with carpets, was the ass-negus or "mouth of the king," as he is called, the chief justice of the empire. Below him were the judges in their white turbans, and all around, forming a semicircle on each side of the tribunal, were the spectators. The criminal was brought forward. According to the Abyssinian custom he was chained to two freemen. This is a precaution against any chance of escape or suicide. It is also hoped that his two guards by chatting with him may induce him to confess his crime.

The prisoner was a little, lame man. He advanced into the vacant spot in front of the ass-negus and declared that during his long life he never heard of or saw a dreadful crime and that the criminal deserved to be hanged.

Another said that he should be burned. A third spoke loud and for a long time, making furious gesticulations and concluding that if the assassin had ten lives he should be executed ten times. All were unanimous in pronouncing the crime abominable. Each one endeavored to be as eloquent as possible, so as to attract the attention of the ass-negus. They were no lawyers, and by the way, it is not safe to call a man a lawyer in Abyssinia, because "lawyer" in that country means "vender of words." They were ordinary subjects who had come to the trial, the jury in all its purity. They were grateful for their movements of sincerity and indignation; but, like all orientals, they were too emphatic and extravagant.

The ass-negus came down from the steps, and turning toward the emperor declared that he would be carried out according to the ancient law.

"Let him be hanged!" said he.

They took away the prisoner, and in a corner they removed his chains. Then he was pinioned. The executioner, a fat fellow with a brutal face, was fully a head taller than the prisoner. The crowd followed him. On the way the women came out of their little huts and uttered lugubrious cries. The prisoner chatted with his guards all the way to the market place where he was hanged. At 89 minutes to 10 o'clock in the morning the sentence was pronounced, and at 5 minutes past 10 the law was vindicated.—Figaro.
