HOW HE GOT KIPLING

A REPORTER'S TUSSLE TO INTERVIEW

After an Unavailing Exhibition of Impudent Nerve the Effort Succeed-

"When Rudyard Kipling first visited this country, he had a short, sharp and secisive pose to which he clung tenaciousa bit of talk out of him when he struck him as a case of a remarkably bright young man afflicted with elephantiasis of the skull. I concluded that all of this anvil chorus music made by the reporters Kipling had met was unjust. I had such an opinion of my own interviewing skill that I would have been willing to lay better than even money that I'd succeed in getting a corking, redhot talk out of the afternoon, too inte for the hotel reporters for the afternoon papers to get in a talk with him. Kipling put up at the Riche-lieu, and I sent my card up to him about 7 o'clock in the evening. After about five minutes a young man wearing a very baggy suit of clothes and the bummest black derby hat I ever saw got off the elevator and shambled into the hotel lobby. I knew the young man was Kipling He looked about the same then as he does now-same builded, rock of Gibraltar jaw, stubby mustache, searching eyes and

"Well, that's how I got Kipling-because I had soldlered, and if there's one thing that interests Kipling more than another it's soldiering. His homely phiz lit up when I mentioned that soldiering incident in my tumultuous career, and for three-quarters of an hour he sat there in the window front of the Hotel Richellen and talked over the military end of it in a elever, luminous, sketchy way that was full of meat. He told me all about the American military posts he had visited, comparing our soldiers with the men who apose the British outfits, and-well, it made over two columns of tiptop stuff.
