THE ANTHRACITE TRADE.

Dealers Not Likely to Stock up at Higher Prices.

The anthracite trade is considered by the Coal Trade Journal:

"The hard coal trade continues in good condition, and there is not one of the producers but who believes in a big business for this interest in the last half of this year. Some of them even go so far as to talk of a large increase over the tonnage that has been done in recent years during that period, and even in excess of the aggregate tonnage in the best months of the six. It remains to be seen if the views of those optimistic gentlemen represent the actual condition of affairs. We fancy there will be some modification, but look for a very good year of it altogether, particularly if prices are not boomed too much There has been some gossip in the papers and among a portion of the trade that there might be an increase in the price-list of anthracite, dating from August 1, but we fail to find this confirmed by officials of the companies who should know whereof they speak. It would not be well for the producer to make any advance at the time stated, for, with the product going as it has for the past two months past, the dealers are in a position to take a 'breathing spell' in the way of purchases, and will not care if the price be changed, for they are not likely to buy again until there are more distinct signs of a diminution of their stocks."

A Charge Refuted.

William Amaliewicz, an East Centre street grocer, was to-day put under $200 bail by Justice Shoemaker, charged by Mrs. Mary Czupukaitis with causing her distress and annoyance by publicly and falsely charging her on the streets with having poisoned and killed a young woman named Mary Buslszentis. The latter worked for Mrs. Czupukaitis and was removed to the almshouse upon becoming ill. She died there, and in a quarrel to-day Amaliewicz charged that the girl died from poisoning administered by Mrs. Czupukaitis.

FROM DAWSON CITY.

Cost of Living in the Gold Country Reaches High Figures.

Harry G. Steele left Shamokin sometime ago for Dawson City with the necessary paraphernalia to launch a daily newspaper in the gold fields. Ham Tiley, editor of the Ashland Telegram, will join him in the near future. Mr. Steele has already reached Alaska, and writes as follows to the Shamokin Herald:

DAWSON, July 6, 1899.

EDITOR HERALD: After a very exciting but thoroughly enjoyable trip I arrived here safely last week and find Dawson a great mining camp. Have been busy during the past few days securing a location for our plant; rents are high and buildings scarce. It costs from $500 to $1,000 a month to occupy even a small store room in a poorly constructed frame building on First avenue or the main business street. I have succeeded in making a deal with a planing mill to erect us a log cabin, 25x40 feet, two stories high on Third avenue, outside of the fire limit, for $275 per month. This is considered a big bargain here. Third avenue is just building up and we have a corner location, at Third avenue and Fourth streets. During the winter there are many fires here, and to be outside the fire limit is a great advantage. Our building is in course of construction, work having been commenced this morning and it will be completed before July 15th, or within eight days. The lot is worth $5,000 and the building will cost $6,000. This is merely for finishing the building in two large rooms—the first and second stories. Everything else is as high in proportion to rents. For instance the hotel I am stopping at charges $10 per day or $290 per month. Any kind of cigar is 50c; lemonade, 50c; laundrying shirts, 50c; collars, 25c. In fact there is no smaller coin here than 25 cents.

As soon as we get our office completed I intend partitioning off a small room, which I will occupy. It appears that the greatest expense here in hotel living is for the room, which costs $4 per day. By having my own room I can get my meals for $100 per month. The plant will likely arrive about July 15 and of course we expect to do a big business. The paper will sell for 25cts a copy and advertising will be worth $40 per inch per month and $50 per inch for what goes on the first page. Job printing charges are about as follows for lots of 1000: Business cards, $25; letter heads, $20; statements, $20; 1-16 dodgers, $22; ¼ sheets, $50; envelopes, $25. Workmen receive $10 per day or from $250 to $300 per month, but as everything is very high here they cannot save a great deal on that salary. There are about ten thousand people here and the new daily has been the talk of the town, which we have billed with posters in two colors. The greatness of this place cannot be conceived and I intend writing a few letters for the Herald. The first will tell of the trip into the country and the others describe the town and its methods of doing business. From these you can get a better idea of life here. H. G. STEEL.
