THE LIPSKY SHOOTING.

Hearing Given the Assailant, Who Tests His Innocence.

Justice Toomey last night gave a hearing to Michael Braszky, who is charged with shooting Anthony Lipsky in the right leg and left foot on Sunday night, while the victim was walking through an alley near the P. & R. passenger depot.

Two men who were with Lipsky at the time of the shooting positively identified the prisoner as the assailant and said no provocation was given for the shooting. Braszky, on the other hand, was just as positive in denying the accusation. He said he never had a revolver. Justice Toomey held him in $800 bail for trial at court. Lipsky was removed to the miners' hospital yesterday.

Waived a Hearing.

Samuel Reed had Philip Coyle, of Mahanoy City, arrested Saturday evening, charging him with assault and battery. It appears that Reed did some work for Coyle for which he refused to pay. A salary collection ensued, which resulted in the defendant slapping the plaintiff's face. Coyle waived a hearing for his appearance at court.

AN AWFUL PLIGHT!

A Man in a Mine Breach Nearly Forty-Eight Hours.

HE WAS RESCUED LAST NIGHT!

Topped into the Breach a Distance of Sixty Feet and Could Not Climb Out—His Presence Discovered by a Man Passing the Place.

Michael Crooke, a resident of Boston Run, was last night rescued from a mine breach in which he was a helpless inmate for almost forty-eight hours. It is astonishing that the fall into the breach and his subsequent sufferings did not kill the man. The breach is sixty feet deep and is located a short distance northeast of Wiggins.

Crooke visited friends in town Saturday night, after which he started for his home on foot. In the darkness he fell into the breach. He cried for help until he became exhausted, but no one heard his cries until yesterday morning, when Edward Lindenmuth, a stable boy employed at the Maple Hill colliery, heard faint moans coming from the breach. Lindenmuth misinterpreted the moans and supposed they came from a cow or some other animal. He was in a hurry to get to work and concluded that he would make an investigation on his way home at night.

Arriving at the breach at night Lindenmuth again heard cries. He could not see the bottom of the breach, but he shouted to see whether the moans came from a human being. Crooke replied as well as his weak condition would permit and Lindenmuth hastened to Turkey Run for aid. Several members of the Defender Hose Company accompanied him to the breach. They took with them a rope which was a little over sixty feet in length, and just long enough to reach the bottom of the breach and allow one end to be fastened along the victim's body. Crooke could not be seen. The rescuing party told him what to do with the rope and he fastened it securely about his waist and gave directions when he was ready to be hauled up.

The man presented a sorrowful appearance, but his joy upon being rescued was so great that he appeared more active than his condition warranted. His story of his experience while in the breach was a touching one. He said the bottom of the breach was covered by several inches of water and this compelled him to remain on his feet during the entire time he was in the breach. He made three attempts to climb out of the place, but the sides of the breach were too perpendicular, and each time he slid back.

Crooke was taken to Gilberton, where Dr. Samuels examined him and said there were indications of internal injuries. These, with the exposure while in the breach, made the man's condition very serious. He was taken to his home.

That Easy Victory.

EDITOR HERALD:—In your columns of last evening's issue the account of the Lehigh Valley-Shenandoah game on Saturday was recorded as an "easy victory" for the visitors. The assertion is true, but the winning of the game may be attributed to the strange players, as only four of the regular team occupied positions on the diamond. To demonstrate the strength and ability of the Shenandoah team, we ask the Lehigh Valley team for another trial game and, if they agree, we will play them for two out of three games. Hoping they will accept, we respectfully remain, SHENANDOAH B. B. CLUB.

You can have a bigger choice of men's and ladies' suitings at the Famous than in any other four stores combined in the county. Go and see them. Their prices for making up are moderate.

Deaths and Funerals.

Mrs. Thomas Fern, a former resident of Centralia, died at Philadelphia. Two weeks ago while arranging for the removal of the body to the latter city she was stricken down with paralysis, which caused her death. She is survived by a husband and five children.

Mrs. Martha Clayton, of Mahanoy City, who died last Saturday after a brief illness, was buried to-day.

Hannah, wife of Josiah Walker, of Wm. Penn, was buried this afternoon. Services were held in the Methodist Episcopal church at Wm. Penn, Rev. W. H. Stewart officiating, and the remains were brought to town for interment in the Old Fellows' cemetery. J. P. Williams & Son, of town, were the funeral directors.

The funeral of the fourteen-month-old son of John and Maggie Lawson took place this afternoon, from the family residence on South West street. Interment was made in the Old Fellows' cemetery. E. J. Davies was the funeral director.

Homeward Bound.

Mrs. Ellen Riley, of South Bower street, had night received a telegram from her son, Thomas P. Riley, stating that he had arrived at Seattle, Washington, on his journey home from Klondike. No particulars were given as to the result of his stay in the gold fields. The receipt of the telegram was a source of joy for Mrs. Riley, as she had not heard from her son for over a year and had not concluded that he was dead.

DIED AT THE HOSPITAL.

A Fall of Coal at Ellangowan Colliery Results Fatally.

A REAR END COLLISION.

It Results in Two Deaths and Wrecks an Engine and Caboose. Scranton, Pa., Sept. 12.—A coal train on the Lackawanna derailed into the rear end of a freight train just as it had pulled out of the switch at Nayack, Pa. The engine and caboose were wrecked, wrecking the pusher engine and caboose of the freight train and killing two of the seven occupants of the caboose.

Joseph Parry and Patrick Mullen, both brakemen, were the killed. Parry was running against the rear wall of the caboose, and had his head crushed. Mullen was trying to get out of the forward end, and was caught between the steps of the caboose and the pilot of the pusher when the latter forced the caboose around sideways and jammed into it a second time.

There were five other men in the caboose, three railroaders and two drovers, but all escaped injury excepting Conductor John Kearney, who sustained an abrasion of the head, and Brakeman Patrick Cavanaugh, who had his hand cut. The engine of the coal train was not hurt, and neither engine crew sustained as much as a scratch.

John Miller, engineer of the coal train, says there was no flag out and that he heard no torpedoes. He could have stopped in time to avert a collision, he says, had it not been that the engineer of the pusher at the rear of his train failed to hear his whistle for down brakes.

Miners Refused to Comply.

It is said that the miners in the Main Buck vein at the Frimrose colliery have been ordered to remove their tools as a result of their refusal to comply with Mine Foreman O'Donnell's instructions to widen their breasts several feet without any extra compensation. The miners in this vein are paid on the amount of yardage they drive. The breasts have, at present, a mean width of eighteen feet.

EXPORT EXPOSITION

The Big Show Which Opens in Philadelphia This Week.

SOME REMARKABLE EXHIBITS

Visitors From All Parts of the World Will Come to View the Marvels of American Handicraft—Five Systems of Lighting to Be Displayed.

(Special Correspondence.)

Philadelphia, Sept. 10.—The City of Brotherly Love, which for a week has been the scene of the greatest gathering of the Grand Army of the Republic, is again putting on her best to welcome the hosts which are to attend the opening of the great National Export exposition next Thursday. This latter is to be an eleven weeks' show, the most interesting, instructive and amusing since the famous Centennial exhibition of 1876, and Philadelphia is making elaborate preparations for the reception of many thousands of guests.

The opening day will be one long to be remembered. Decorations on a most extensive scale will be seen everywhere. The North Atlantic squadron under command of Rear Admiral Sampson, will take part, and dignitaries from all sections of the country will be present to witness the launching of the great industrial show.

The buildings in which the exposition is to be held are well worth a trip across the continent to see. Five of them form a grand group, perhaps the finest architectural pile on the American continent. The exhibits surpass anything hitherto attempted, while the amusement features will be all that the most exacting fan lover could desire. It was the original intention of the promoters of the great project to organize an exposition which would be at once a school and show combined. This they have succeeded in doing in a most excellent manner, and the American man, woman or child who does not spend at least a few days within the grounds and buildings will have cause for regret. Of course the prime idea of the exposition is for the advertisement of American trade abroad. This was the original conception, and it is certainly novel and interesting. Other exhibitions of the past, from the Centennial to the Omaha exhibition, but recently closed, gathered as far as possible the products of the world for the purpose of making a show and incidentally, perhaps, of making money or advertising a certain section, but the National Export exposition is upon entirely different lines, and it is bound to be successful beyond that of any former exposition.

The exposition is the outgrowth of the Philadelphia Commercial Museum, the most famous bureau of industrial information in the world. Dr. Wilson, head of the Museum, is director general of the exposition, and largely through his untiring efforts has the great project been brought to its present enviable state. Through him the co-operation of the United States government, the state of Pennsylvania and city of Philadelphia was secured.

It is impossible to estimate the influence for good which the Museum has exercised, but it has undoubtedly been a powerful factor in developing the export trade of the United States to its present astounding volume. Half a dozen years ago we held but an insignificant position as an exporting nation. At the close of this fiscal year, when the balance sheet for export trade was made up by different countries, it was found that for the first time in history the United States was in the lead of all nations in the world.

And now, as the climax of its services, it has inaugurated the National Export exposition, where from all parts of the country the American manufacturer will send in his exhibit, and from all parts of the world the potential purchaser will come to examine it. And there will be hundreds of thousands of visitors from all parts of the United States, from Europe, from Asia, from Africa, from the entire civilized globe. Several hundred commercial organizations, representing the merchants of almost every nation of the world, have sent or promised to send delegations to Philadelphia.

In addition, it is estimated that not less, and perhaps more, than ten thousand buyers and other representatives of foreign business associations will be among the spectators. They will wear their native costumes. Merchants from lightest Africa, from mystic India, from resplendent Persia, from fantastic China, all in many colors
